LATEST INTELLIGENCE

By Telegraph to the New-York Daily Times.

THREE DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE

ARRIVAL OF THE ASIA AT HALIFAX.

SEBASTOPOL AGAIN BOMBARDED.

The Mamelon and White Tower Carried by the Allies.

240 SHIPS DESTROYED BY THE ALLIES.

CONFUSION AND TROUBLE IN SPAIN.

Consolidation of Democracy.

By the Boston Morning Post express, from No. 61 Wall-st. Hamilton Wednesday, June 20.

The Royal Mail steamship Asia, Captain Lott, from Liverpool on the afternoon of the 9th inst., arrived here at 1½ this morning.

She left Liverpool on the afternoon of Saturday, the 9th inst.; her advices are consequently three days later than those received by the St. Louis.

The Asia will probably reach Boston in season to be dispatched for Halifax in the afternoon train of Thursday, due in New-York at midnight.

The news is quite of a highly exciting character. The bombardment of Sebastopol was renewed on the 6th instant, and on the day the Allies sailed intelligence was received from Lord Raglan, dated "June 5—6 o'clock P. M." announcing that after a fierce bombardment, the French attacked and carried the "Mamelon" and the "White Tower"—the greatest gallantry being displayed on both sides.

The loss fell on the Russians and the French was very great, but no figures are given.

This event gave great buoyancy to the public funds, and caused a slight rise in Consols.

Madame Ganeau was arrested in Paris on Sunday, June 3, and kept in Clichy, the debtor's prison, till Monday, at the instance of a French exhibitor of objects of taste at the New-York Crystal Palace, whose goods being broken and injured, he sought redress in vain in Assurgen; the first Director who presented himself being Sherlow, in whose quarter, after having been 14 Paris a fortnight. The suit was heard on the 4th of June, when Madame was, of course, set at liberty. He is highly worth, and is said to be preparing a document of the most stinging sort on the subject.

THE WAR.

The general bombardment of Sebastopol was renewed on the 6th of June, with what result has not transpired.

The Conference of Vienna having been formally closed at the instigation of the Western Powers, negotiations for peace are not likely to be renewed unless Russia shall apply to Austria for her good offices.

Prussian correspondence says that Austria considers herself released from all engagements to the Western Powers, the latter having refused to consider peace on reasonable terms.

Austria, however, will endeavor herself the Ally of France and England, but subject to article one of the treaty of December 2, which says, "The High contracting Powers reserve to themselves the right of assuming, according to circumstances, such resolutions as they may judge necessary for the general interests of Europe." Of this right Austria takes advantage.

The Vienna papers advise us that although the Conferences are closed, Russian Plenipotentiaries hold for Austrian propositions under consideration. Meanwhile the Military Commissions of France and Great Britain have left Vienna.

The appointment of Baron Manderstrom as Special Envoy to Vienna is announced, and considered important. His supposed object being to avail himself of the present neutrality of Austria to effect an armed neutrality among the Central Powers of Europe.

The war news by this arrival consists mostly of details of previous Government telegraphs. Details are to hand of the affair before Sebastopol night of May 22, but the main facts were previously known. The details show great gallantry on the part of the French, but also show that the victory was not in reality a further success, but merely a successful attempt to destroy very dangerous works which the Russians had erected in front of their defence, and which would have outflanked the French attack. The Russian plan was to unite all their ambuscades by a line of gabions connected by a continuous covered way with their present defences; to enclose, in fact, an entirely new space of ground. The French plan was to carry this new defence and remain in it into a French position, which was accomplished at an immense loss, which, says Pelissier, gave to the engagement the proportions of a battle. Pelissier's despatch is quite interesting. Details have also been received of the Allied advance on the Tchernaya. The Allied force consisted of 20,000 men, French, Sardinians and Turks. The Russians made no opposition, but retired with their guns. The condition of the ground shows that the Russians never intended to maintain the position. New reconnoissances had been made, and a further advance was expected. The telegraphic accounts indicate that the Allies are yet on their own side of the river.

Details have been received likewise of the capture of Kertch. The invading force numbered nearly 30,000 men—namely, 10,000 French, 5,000 Turks, and 2,500 English, in numerous steamers. The expedition entered the Strait of Kertch on Thursday, the 24th, and commenced firing upon the Forts of Ambulaki—the garrisons of which speedily abandoned the place, having previously blown up the magazines. The Allied gun-boats silenced the Paulovskaya Battery, and burned some Russian boats and small craft. The garrisons of Kertch and Yenikale, variously estimated at from two to ten thousand strong, were seen to leave and fall back into the interior by the southern road.

Meanwhile the Allies landed without opposition at Amatchki, where they bivouacked for the night. The next morning they moved on towards Kertch. Gun-boats were all the time occupied in scouring the Tamanskaya Gulf, and reducing the fort on the Sand Bank. All the inhabitants had fled. Many houses were burning, and by Friday, at 3 o'clock, the empty cities of Kertch and Yenikale were in the hands of the Allies, and a steam flotilla immediately entered the Sea of Azoff; the last Winter's temptation had wished away the 40 ships sunk across the Strait by the Russians. The Allies found 17,000 tons of coal at Kertch, and 80 dismantled guns, but no powder or stores. The total number of vessels burned by the Allies is 240. The Allies propose to fortify Yenikale and garrison it by Turks, but will not hold Kertch. The steamers of light draft are cruising as near as possible to Taganrog, and gun-boats, yet lighter, are preparing. Considerable discrepancy exists in the accounts of the allied proceedings at Genitschi. Sidney Herbert, in Parliament on the 6th, expressly said that the press draw inferences from the successes that are not justified by the facts, for editorials speak as if Arabat and Genitschi were taken; but, although the Allies have bombarded the east and destroyed the stores at the other place, they are not yet in possession of them, and it

THE TURF FOR 1855.

Yesterday afternoon there was considerable excitement among the sportmen at Union Course, Long Island, relative to the trotting match between two of our most celebrated horses. For this contest, many have been looking forward with considerable interest. The steeds were trained with great care and skill by the respective horsemen. During the past year, Lady Franklin has been under the management of Hiram Woodruff, Esq., who brought her out yesterday in fine condition, and seemed determined to come off the victor. Mr. George Spicer also showed Lantern in tip-top order, and felt confident that he would be successful.

The conditions of the race were mile heats, best three in five, in harness, for $2,000, and Lady Franklin had the call at $100 to $80. There was a full attendance on the track, and at 4 o'clock the sport commenced. The horses had scored several times, when they were called up by the judges and the drivers instructed to get ready for a start. They came to the stand close together and received the word. Lady was right down to her work, while Lantern acted rather wild, but soon settled into a square trotting gait. This heat was very closely contested, and won by Lady Franklin in two minutes and forty seconds.

On the next heat, Lady Franklin exhibited rather more speed than before, and the odds was too on in favor of her winning the race. She won this heat quite handily in two minutes and thirty-six seconds.

The third heat was a sharp one, and produced quite a commotion among those who had risked their lucklin. Lady Franklin, however, is by far too speedy for Col. Hall's Lantern, but yet, there are numerous sportsmen who decline to believe it. The "Lady," won this last heat in 2:38½, and was declared victor in the spirited contest.

The Hero and Pocahontas pacing match comes off this afternoon, over the Union Course. If the weather is fair, there will be a good time.

Cricket.

The match between the Second Elevens of the St. George's and New-York Cricket Clubs took place yesterday on the Hoboken Cricket ground, and resulted in the defeat of the St. George's men by 74 runs. The play was not first rate, as will be seen by the score,—the bowling of Scott and his fielding, also Castle's batting and wicket keeping, Sewhard's batting, Calverly, Harrison, Peterson, Porter and Spinny's batting and fielding on the part of the New-Yorkers are the exceptions. What does Paterson out of the First Eleven? Fortune deserted the banner of St. George. Where was Meiselbach and some of their other strong Second Eleven men? Bailey was the only man who kept up the reputation of St. George for making a score off the bat. Bach's Fallow series availed him nought; he fell like most of the rest. Our base friend and neighbor Vernon has not furnished us with an account of his doings. By way of "copy," he is seen through a pair of spectacles. The bowling was miserable and knocked all over the field. The score will explain itself:

We shall look for stirring times amongst the cricketers this season. Last week St. George's best Philadelphia. Next Wednesday the 1st Elevens contend for the mastery between St. George and New-York. The "Paterson," "Newark," "Harlem," "Washington," "Williamsburgh," "Albany," "Utica," and last, though not least, the Free Academy Cricket Clubs, have matches on the tapis. Even the Deaf and Dumb Institution are likely to have a cricket ground, as the pupils have had it introduced, and are playing the game when they can spare time from their studies, on the vacant lots near the Institution, at Fifteenth-street and Third-avenue. This healthful game seems to be making considerable progress amongst us.

ENGLAND.

General method by which Boar Meat is made Palatable—Parliamentary and Theatrical Doings.

Special Correspondence of the N. Y. Daily Times.

London, Tuesday, June 5, 1855.

"The English," says Girardin's Presse, "have, during the last few days, got wonderfully warlike, as if they had not a very strong peace party among them." True, the change is quite remarkable. The recent bill of fare from the Crimea has given a strange development to the national appetite. L'appetit vient en mangeant, say "our gallant allies," and John Bull is, as you know, a gourmand when not obliged to keep a fast day. Gorgon says that "the Church has a good stomach, because she has eaten up whole countries without as yet having had enough." Britannia might, I think, be ranked a match to that power of insatiable digestion. A few weeks ago John would have been satisfied with a couple of chops from the Russian Bear. Now he wishes for more, and almost goes" for the whole animal." A roast bear, well done at the fire of revolution, is, however, not a dish for aristocratic palates. These, like true gourmets as they are, have a longing for only the paws, a la sauce piquante, which, on the Continent, is deemed to be a dish of extreme delicacy. However that may be, people begin to talk of the repayment by Russia of the war expenses. The knowledge which the country at large has, somewhat slowly, to be sure, comes to respecting the utter absurdity of the reliance on Austria's friendly promises, altered the tone of many an organ of public opinion, and the language of otherwise very cautious men and newspapers, begins to become unusually bold and haughty. Would that this language could be relied upon; but this we have no good reason for. It is not the language of manly resolution, to attain, at any price, undaunted by reverses, a noble aim of general usefulness. It is only the language of braggarts, who but the other day hardly dared to speak at all except in a whisper, and who now talk loud on hearing that some 300 merchant vessels in the Sea of Azoff have been bored to the ground. Let some news come to-morrow announcing a failure in some important operation to dislodge the enemy, and you shall see what all these "brave words" will come to. As there is, however, little prospect for an effective resistance on the part of the Russians,—who surely have spent their best time in fabulous idleness,—this braggadocio of the Allies must be taken into serious consideration, because it may, if spurred by fresh successes, drive the Government to go beyond the four points, still maintained, though momentarily eclipsed. But a war thus fluctuating in purpose and decision is evidently based upon no principle at all. It may serve the special interests of some narrow-minded policy of monarchic jealousies, but it cannot be called the war of Civilization versus Barbarism. And to say it out, once for all, I never expected, and shall never expect, to see England—such as it is constituted—carrying on any other than wars of policy. If I were an M. P., I would be for peace, but not from any such senile, or silly, or perverse reasons as are adduced by the Gladstones, Bright's and Gibsons; but I would be for peace, and tell it the House as often as I could find occasion to do so,—"because Great Britain, with its Queen, Lords, Bishops and Commoners, with its Oligarchy and sham Constitution, cannot be the champion of Justice and Freedom and Right." And I wonder that no man of radical principles has as yet made use of any such argument—the only one that would be patriotic, popular and efficient—to condemn the war as immoral, because carried on for no good end. And if I must say all my conviction, I have no faith in any near change for the better in this country's position, in respect to its own Government. Public opinion in England is a fiction. It is fabricated or connoticed by those who rule. For that it may, when real, influence the Crown, it must begin to set lordly castles in flames, to throw stones against a Wellington to be,—in a word, one step from the horrors of a most ferocious outburst of deep-rooted, desperate discontent. I do not say that a long war would not produce and develop such a public opinion; but as for the present, Englishmen are worse than sleepy. I have seen something, the other evening, set at all complimentary to that much vaunted public opinion. I went to see Miss Helen Faucit and Mr. B. Sullivan, at the Haymarket Theatre, in the "Lady of Lyons." The dramatic interest of the evening was, however, for me not in Bulwer's affecting piece—it was in a farce called "Cody a Halfpenny." It is a trifle made for Mr. Buckstone, to display the absurd fashion in gentlemen's dress and manners. A lady riding in an omnibus has just a halfpenny less than enough to pay her fare. A gentleman helps her out of that trouble, and the next day calls to be repaid, and marries her. An absurd story, forsooth, but good for a laugh. But what is not good is this: the lady, who, on being called upon to pay her debt, has no "change," asks her uncle—who just comes home, and knows nothing of the whole affair—to "give a halfpenny to that gentleman." The uncle, looking at the stranger, finds that he is "rather well dressed for a beggar;" but then a sudden idea comes to him, and he remarks—"Oh! a political refugee, probably!" Then he turns to the stranger and addresses him thus: "Poorer, take this and beg no more." Now, this I would not object to in the least, though I be rather curious to hear such generous allusions in "hospitable" England, from a public stage. What I object to, and was, indeed, disgusted with, is the utter indifference with which these mean words were received, by a house filled in every corner. French playwriters are certainly the most abject set of political partizans, and have written and will write anything that is base, to flatter the powers that be. But then, a French public would never allow words like the above quoted to pass without a strong disapproval—a partial if not a general hissing. Here, not a single sound of disgust was heard; and those who did not laugh approvingly remained in "gentlemanly" silence, and the farce is declared to be highly successful. And these folks are talking of their sympathies for Poland, Hungary, Italy! They boast of being the friends of the exile and the homeless—they profess to emancipate the exiled nationalities! Apage—cold-hearted, selfish comedians.

Parliament has sat yesterday evening. The debates on Disraeli's motion, or rather on its amendments, have been reopened. That of Baring will be adopted. It is the most unmeaning, and has the support of the Cabinet, which, perched now on the tomb of Mithridates at Kertch, is looked upon as very martial indeed. A combination between the Tories and Peelites, and the Manchesterians, may, however, produce an unlooked-for result, so that it is not impossible that all amendments should be lost, with a certain blank left for the Government to write upon what is likely—some, so, was. The Conferences were to have been definitively closed yesterday, but I would not wonder if Austria should have contrived to bring forth some very promising new proposals, and if Gortschakoff would have showed a very conciliatory spirit indeed. We were promised, for this morning, news announcing the actual closing of the shop of dealers in diplomatic quibbles, but this news is not yet come. It may do under the evening debates, in which the Manchesterians will, I hear, be the chief performers.

The news from the Crimea, though it allows a continual progress in the operations of the allies, is however, of no great importance. The Russian Commander-in-Chief takes that position very coolly, and reports the loss of his ships and ships in a wonderfully philosophic tone. This circumstance might be taken as very significant, but for the helplessness of the Russians for a great series of inaction and strategy; but with their numbers before our eyes, that continuous may never nothing more than the stalemate in a game for defeat. It seems, indeed, pretty certain that unless the Russians be in unprovided force, and provided with inexhaustible stores of provisions and ammunition, in the interior of the Peninsula, Sebastopol and its defenders are still bent in a very bad position as to the future time. There is evidently a movement of by a strong detachment against the mouth of Perekop, and thus to insulate the peninsula from the continent with the Empire. General Pelissier, on leaving the chief command, has declared his faith in success—he is "sure of it." Such a vow must be acted up to, or it will bring ridicule upon the man who uttered it.

From the Baltic, we have some rumors about impending attacks against us and known what strongholds. France is to send an expeditionary corps to take another Bomarsund.

The Carlist movement in Spain seems to have been crushed, or nearly so.

FRANCE.

THE FRENCH EXPOSITION.

When is it to Close—Where and When Held.

Special Correspondence of the N. Y. Daily Times.

Paris, Tuesday, June 5, 1855.

AN HOUR IN THE GENERAL BALLOT.

Without wasting time upon the exterior of the edifice, which is very generally disliked, as presenting the front of a barracks and a tobacco's back for a roof—which is cooped at on the green trees it has sacrificed and the space in the promenade it occupies—let us enter boldly by the several gates set apart for our several conditions in life. You will pass through one of the entry turnstiles, which clicks as you enter, and registers the coin you have left, in its memory of iron. I, in virtue of the munificence of the Imperial Commission, am armed with a ticket good for just ten days more, get in the best way I can. (The Company, be it known, makes it as pressing and as difficult as possible for the napping visitor to obtain access to the building.) Once in, we are free from menageries, except the glass-house exhibitions, which suggests Cayenne to one who has been there, and reminds of it one who has escaped from thence. There is little done saving and hammering, and the Exposition is four-fifths complete. At eleven every day it is washed and dusted and ready for company.

The arrangement of the building is briefly this: The portions of space allotted to nations and individuals are principally in the galleried upper stories, and beneath those galleries, upon the ground floor. The central floor itself—the whole space under the glass roof—is occupied by the more striking specimens of artistic industry, and generally such single products as deserve a prominent position, without distinction of origin. The grand floor is cosmopolite and neutral; the side aisles are cut up into fragments, just as the map is painted in patches. With this simple clue, the whole building at once assumes a distinct form, and loses its labyrinthine aspect.

At the very entrance in the glass department, placed there easily upon the visitor's mind, I presume, to show him that all the glass in Paris was not used in the manufacture of the roof. There are panes of glass packed for exportation, lookers upon plate like a succession of shady out shrubs, prepared as it were for fancy pomegranates. One naturally inclines to pull at one and, in if there were certainly fragrance and flavor, or the other. Then there are glass coasts for checks and vases, but big enough to contain a giant upright; and there, we are told, were blown by the breath of a single man; there are singular escorts for chemical vase, looking like overgrown soap-bubbles; bottles of extra quality and fine workmanship, but empty, in compliance with the prescriptions of the free trade law. Though perhaps an empty bottle is more nearly to be an empty one than one which has never been filled. Huge sheets of colored glass complete the collection; they make you regret that eclipses of the sun are not more frequent.

Here is the instantaneous process of taking likenesses: and the display shows how completely photography has superseded daguerreotype. Mayer, a Jew, exhibits specimens of a very high order, but which the sitter will never find attempted by his own portrait, while Thompson, from Aberdeen, exhibits specimens no better than he is prepared to furnish to all "who may favor him with a visit." His faces, the size of life—taken by a new and extraordinary machine—are remarkable, though not yet of the perfection which they will be finally to reach.

Then the Printing Department. Here is a sheet of postage stamps which reminds one of his neglected private correspondence; and a sheet representing 720 shades of four colors, green, blue, red and yellow. There are ten chromatic circles, with 72 graduated rays to each. It is a triumph of arrangement, though it hurts the eyes, like the musical whirligig in Barnum's Museum.

Then the Binding Department. Gilt edge books like solid ingots, and gold leaf may be taken for old family plate. Massive ledgers and fair letter books resemble the archives of a dynasty, or the registers of a recording angel. They inspire one with a passion for accounts, and the definition ruling with the rectangular red lines, in the margin, suggests the image of Zerah Colburn engraving in them with a diamond pointed pen.

Just about here begins the patented "improvement map." Every town is marked by a brass-headed nail, and this nail, upon its corresponding state in the alphabetical table, being smartly touched, jumps up and protrudes about half an inch from the surface, saying, "Here I am." There are 400 stops arranged in twelve columns, and 400 brass headed nails. The wires are invisible, but form an amazing net-work and crisscross, behind, out of sight. The invention is ingenious and highly commendable.

Then a perfumery stand, with enough to convert the deluge into scent. It is impossible, in the face of this supposedness, impossible, to credit the current statistics that every Parisian takes but two baths a year.

Lemonnier, the artist in hair, and auxiliary jeweler, exhibits a master-piece, in the form of a huge oval picture, with a magnificent frame. It represents a bird of prey, perched upon an oak tree, menacing a goose and a brood of goslings. The picture is cemented, so as to admit all those figures, which are of the size of life, and in relief. What their bodies are made of I cannot say; but the feathers and plumage of the birds, the bark and foliage of the tree, the long leaves of the aquatic vegetation, and the whole surface of the earth and gravel, are plaited of human hair. It is a very curious performance, but is much more suited to a museum than to a temple of industry.

made in France by machinery, precisely as wooden mousetraps are made at home. A copper centre, of ordinary dimensions, and enclosed by hand in accordion-like folds of tissue, convolutes, by a ticket, that is in reality of tissue. A flowering shrub, in a pot, with a delicate pink blossom, tinkles when you lay hands your finger and, as would a sheet from gold. A long curved leaf, a base imitation of a tropical production, would make a very serviceable cane. All these manufactures of borrowed whims might do very well for brass, but are quite unworthy of bronze.

The conspicuous point of honor is the famous St. Gobain plate of glass, 16 feet high by 12 wide, and without spot or flaw. It is upright, and surrounded by a massive white and gilt frame. Unfortunately for the triumph of a very beautiful art, it is quite invisible. No two can see the same. I do not see all sure it is there. I have looked for it, but looked through it and beyond it beneath. At 10 o'clock in the morning, before it is really for visitors, you can see dust upon it, but for those itself no eye hath seen. It neither reflects what it believes it, nor wants the most delicate hues upon what is behind it.

The bookpanels, under the gallery, is a collection of models of the most famous English lighthouses, bridges, docks, railroads, jetties, &c., interesting enough, but out of place here, which they are illustrative of the skill of the model-maker; as for studies of the real bridges and jetties, they would be more at home in the Architectural or the Marine Museum.

Ah, here we are at the American Department. The rural eye contains the names of 70 exhibitors, and numbers 30 (it should have said 60,) more than a second edition. The Exposition has been open three weeks. There is not one single American article yet ready to be examined. A show case of Colt's pistols may be seen, but it is unarranged; a superb pair of scales is provisionally in a corner; and a model of a North River steamboat is half expected. I am sorry to say that this model, which bears the name of "American," in every inferior in size, workmanship and finish, to the seven Jerry, one of the boats of the Dunnham Company. This is all thus far in the Palace itself. We shall do better in the Annexe for raw material and machinery, where our appearance is already creditable, but must wait some days yet for proper power.

The central door, for the exceptional and special products, is though heterogeneous in a bazaar, as interesting as a gallery of art. The Emperor's aviary—[illegible] birds imprisoned in a sculptured cage, embowered in the cages forever; a military, consisting of four mirrors set in carved marble frames, and mounted on a marble pedestal from Carrara; [illegible] of fine cases and canvas; an immense show case of wax work from Brussels, representing Jesus Christ as large as life, with a superb gold beard and fairy red hair, giving the keys of heaven to St. Peter—other wax figures looking gaudily on,—and all this as the centre the exhibitor's skill, in manufacturing church embroidery; a carved pulpit; an orchestra Venice de Milo, three or four times the size of nature; a battery of musical instruments; an English pile of naval and marine [illegible], cotton cloth, stores of new plans for steamers, life-boats, all heaped up into an unsymmetrical confusion, the whole commanded by a figure dressed in the new costume for divers, [illegible] of Lycoll silks and St. Etienne ribbons in extraordinary variety; and [illegible] practical lightness, as brilliant with their seven colors as the silks and ribbons themselves; and those fountains which also to spout fresh water up into the tropical atmosphere of the conservatory, though not yet completed, are the more noticeable objects in a scenery view like the present.

Up stairs the air is naturally more oppressive. I suppose that a location have was allotted to the Honorable East India Company, out of a sentiment of geographical and equatorial propriety. You breathe a new air, and are certainly in a new civilization. The eye roams upon strange devices and unusual colors—dull red, chiefly, leaden blue, pale green, and dead yellow. Were we a Hindoo, we could return, in the East Indian corner, our Hindoo every day life, to complete in the collection of commercial and appliances. We could dress in cashmere or gold-embroidered velvet, recline on Medean carpets, under team woven of gilt thread; smoke with a silver pursed, ornamented with dangling silver tassels; sit in chairs whose sculpture resembles a chinese puzzle; worship in pagodas on the scale of an inch to a yard, before idols reduced, but quite as frightful as the original; play at chess on boards cut from the tusks of elephants, with men all of whose are either gods or monsters—it might, however, be hardly safe to checkmate a king who is a potentate in this world or a deity in the next. Were we a Thug, we might easily continue our mysterious profession, in the Crystal Palace, for a Thug's poignard, dyed in the blood of seven hundred persons, is shown among a panoply of steel. The Indian department, the first ready, and thus far the most frequented, very seriously detracts from the title and motive of the Exposition. There is a large display of Indian curiosities, but a slender collection of the products of Indian industry.

As we pass through long streets of dry goods, we have barely time to notice the pyramids of spools of cotton, the sheets of lace, the devices executed with needles, the monumental built of pins and fishhooks, the western figures dressed in ready-made clothing, with the prices affixed, the trophy composed of piles of cordage of every size, from single-ply twine up to chain hawsers, nor the thousand and one graceful arrangements of the more common articles of every-day use.

The roof is piercing the clouds and the ground floor vast. The gallery is becoming quite extensive. The wax dolls of Madame Martanari look as if they might move. It would be a pity, for Mr. M. has succeeded better than any predecessor in giving to her dolls the peculiar chubbiness of infancy. Everybody knows how a baby's flesh is given to swell and burst forth in the vicinity of any pressure, and how a bulge of fatness springs up each side of a tucker shoulder-strap. Mrs. M. has rendered to wax this peculiarity of extreme youth with wonderful precision. She excels, also, in drapery. I feel convinced that Madame Martanari must have been a mother. By contrast with the red and white offspring of the Caucasians, she exhibits a copper-colored Osseola one foot high, accompanied with a biographical sketch. From this we learn that he died cursing the pale-faces.

After the dolls have in the show case of a bandanna. He displays a Venus in a state of nature, with a Venus revised and corrected, by the employment of scraps, back-boards, patent corsets and things and girths of peculiar appearance. A contemplation of the window leads you to rejoice that if nature is so clumsy and faulty in her creations, art is so skillful in her adaptations and modifications.

And here is the Sights, or refreshment counter. Of all the disappointments connected with the Exposition, this is most severe and probably the most irremediable. The tariff received thus far does not cloth the cost price of the very lowest cuisine [illegible] on the banks of the Seine. I have not yet seen even those patent cooking stoves. Such delights are unmentionable, as the prices are not unreasonable.

Moreover, this will all need under the invigoration communicated by the one-franc days, which have commenced with success, or, to speak generally, with comparative success. The relative absence of visitors in the Exposition generally is indicated by the fact, that on the Free Sunday the attendance was less by a thousand at the two offices than at the Hyde Park Palace on the more advantageous pay day. I think the average number of visitors for the three one franc days has not been over 20,000. The stock is at 130 lower than ever before.

We will visit the Exposition again soon, but not till we have seen the fine arts and the machinery at least cases.

Affairs at Madrid.

Special Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

PARIS, Tuesday, June 5, 1855.

The news from Madrid during the past week, shows that it has been the theatre of surmises, rumors, &c., of every species. All the facts I can gather I send you. Affairs are not very promising there at present, although the factions have been beaten, or rather dispersed at two or three points of Arragon. Light columns of cavalry and infantry are scouring that province and part of Valencia with various success. Up to the present moment, the rebels have never been in force at any one point superior to two hundred men or thereabouts; but there are numerous small parties, and I have just heard of the rise of one in Catalonia, commanded by a Cura. Orders had been forwarded immediately from Madrid for that province. A conspiracy was discovered in Madrid on the night of the 28th, and seven "Curas" were arrested at two in the morning in a little church in the street of the "Caballero de Gracia," who had banners prepared and men ready to proclaim CHARLES VI. Many other persons have also been arrested implicated in this affair. Amongst the rest, Don JUAN GUTIERREZ, ex-chief of the staff of CABRERA, three commandants or majors on half-pay, and many other priests, two of them honorary chaplains to the Queen. Two persons were arrested on the road from Madrid to Saragossa, laden with money and diplomas in blank for the Carlists. Three of the rebel sergeants who were taken and shot, had already been invested with a pair of epaulets and the rank of captain. Don LUIS MONTERROS, ex-Intendente of DON CARLOS, was arrested at Tudela on his way to the North, with the object, it is stated, of beginning the civil war in Navarre. This is thought to be an important capture; it was effected through the telegraph. Every day the revelations are more important and of a graver nature. After long discussion, the Cortes gave the Government the requisite authority to remove and arrest persons, and suspend papers asked for on the 23d, by a vote of 124 to 49. All other questions are merged at present in this pervading topic. The Minister of Justice, AGUIRRE, addressed a circular to the political governors of the different provinces, desiring them to keep an eye on all the clergy, etc., which was stringent, harsh and unbecoming, as, after various dispositions, it said: "You will also separate from these curacies all who may be regarded as suspicious by the civil authority. The Minister being called upon in the Cortes, said that it was a mistake on the part of his clerks in copying the circular, and then it ought to have been, after enumerating those who were to be separated, such as avowed Carlists, etc., "and that they may be regarded as suspicious by the civil authority—an explanation which was received with shouts of laughter and rather derisive remarks. It is thought that he will resign. The Queen continues at Aranjuez, but will soon return to Madrid. No Minister has as yet been appointed to Washington, although they now speak of a Sr. OLIVER as being the fortunate individual. The Biscayan Provinces have presented a petition to the Cortes, praying that the law of release from Mortmain may not take effect within their limits. I have just received later intelligence from Madrid. On the 1st June a Royal decree was published, declaring Valencia also under martial law; and a circular from Gen. SAN MIGUEL, Inspector General of the National Militia, to the commanders of the Militia of the different Provinces, ordering vigilance and caution, and that the Militia should assist the troops in garrison duty, and also in the open field, if necessary; and that in such points where only a small force of Militia existed they should be withdrawn, to prevent the faction getting possession of their arms. The frontiers o France are watched with the greatest vigilance. Rumors are rife of an approaching change in the Ministry—AGUIRRE to retire, as I told you before; MALLOZ to the Interior, which, no doubt, would be a blessed relief to him, and some new hand for the Treasury. All these things will probably be settled before my next. The Duke and Duchess of MONTPENSIER left on the 31st for Murcia, en route for Italy and Switzerland.

The weather in Madrid has been uncommonly cold. On the 1st of June coats and cloaks were very necessary. The cholera has gone down to 10 or 11 cases daily. The Funds, which had gone down also, were a little better yesterday. Consols, 31.90; Deferred, 17.82; Exchange on London, 50.80. "Adios." If anything else reaches me before the mail leaves, you shall have it.

Yours, truly, AN AMERICAN.

FOREIGN EXTRACTS.

"In spite of all the efforts which the enemy have made, our bulwarks stand as fast as ever. Long before the bombardment began, the journals of the West informed us that our walls and forts were speedily to be put to a new proof. This made us redouble our precautions, and we bore firmly the truly murderous (ladische) fire which threatened all with destruction. Nevertheless, thousands were devoted to death, and it made one shudder to see the Elburus (the steamboat) pass every two hours during the bombardment from the south to the north with so many wounded that she could scarcely carry them. While standing in Bastion No. 4—the bastion which suffered most of all—I forgot the danger to which I was exposed, in admiration of the cool and stoical conduct of our sailors. They fell and expired without a cry, though racked by the most fearful agonies. The southern side of our town has suffered most severely, and is scarcely to be recognized again; 300 houses have been totally destroyed, and grass is growing on their ruins. The beautiful theatre no longer exists. Though the upper districts of the town are not so much damaged, yet there is not a single house to be seen which does not bear manifest traces of the bombardment. The streets are everywhere rooted up by shot, and the pavement is totally destroyed, while at every corner stand whole pyramids of the enemy's cannon balls, and exploded shells, which were daily collected before the opening of the fire. In many streets five or six such pyramids are to be seen, each of them from eight to ten feet high. Nevertheless, business is continued, and booths are open for the sale of goods."

The war correspondent of the London Daily News gives in a recent letter the following instance of intrepid daring by a Russian soldier. He says:

"A Russian exhibited remarkable coolness in the performance of a very daring, and, as far as could be understood, unnecessary act, about 11 o'clock on the morning of Saturday, the 12th inst. The man alluded to walked out of a trench on the side of the Mamelon Vert, running nearly parallel with the series between the Mamelon and Frenchman's hill. He was completely enveloped in a white covering, of linen or such material, his head being wrapped round with it as well as his body. The object seemed to be to render himself as conspicuous as possible, for as the sun was shining with a strong glare at the time, the contrast with the grass and dark ground was very marked. The upper part of his body was first seen, but as he walked coolly on to the open ground he became fully exposed to view. When first observed he could not have been more than five hundred yards from the bayou, at the right of the advanced works, towards which his back was turned; but the men in the trench did not seemingly perceive him, as they did not fire. A party of men and officers, however, about two hundred yards further of along the advanced work, saw him at once, and discharged altogether about thirty shots at him from their Minies. The first few bullets fell short, but the range being altered, the remainder were observed to kick up the dust on all sides of him. The white gentleman of the Mamelon took no notice beyond looking round twice; he neither hastened his pace, bent his body, nor in any way evinced a desire to elude the leaden messengers which were sent to arrest his progress. Six or seven minutes elapsed before he was again under shelter of the works. As there was a covered way at no great distance, along which he could have passed in safety, this extraordinary exposure was manifestly voluntary, or, if forced, must be as a punishment. Perhaps it was done for a wager."

In his seventh volume of the Consulat et Empire, M. THIERS narrates the negotiations and confidential intercourse of the two Emperors, in July, 1807, at Tilsit. There, he tells us, they discussed "that immense system by which they were hold joint rulers over Europe. The possible, the probable, partition of the Turkish empire, was the continual topic of conversation." NAPOLEON was to have the maritime provinces, Russia the banks of the Danube as far as the Balkans. "One day," says the historian, "the two Emperors, on returning from a long ride, shut themselves up in the writing cabinet, where numerous maps were spread out. NAPOLEON, apparently continuing a conversation briskly begun with ALEXANDER, desired M. DE MENEVAL to bring him the map of Turkey, unfolded it, then resumed the conversation, and, suddenly clapping his fingers on Constantinople, exclaimed several times, regardless of being heard by his Secretary, in whom he had absolute confidence, 'Constantinople! Constantinople! Never! 'tis the Empire of the world!'" M. THIERS adds in a note that he had these particulars from M. DE MENEVAL himself, and that their accuracy is guaranteed by the correspondence of MM. DE SAVARY and DE CAULAINCOURT. They prove, he remarks, that notwithstanding all the efforts of ALEXANDER, the limit of the Balkans was never passed. The Occult Treaty, signed at Tilsit, he further states, merely contained a stipulation that in case the Turkish Government refused the mediation of France, its European provinces, excepting Constantinople and Roumelia, should be relieved "from the vexations of the Porte." Anxious, then, as NAPOLEON was in 1807 to gain the Russian alliance, there was one price he would not pay for it. He would not tolerate Russian dominion south of the Balkans; and though he professed, under certain contingencies, a willingness to advance the Russian frontiers to that range, subsequent events proved that he was insincere in those professions, and never intended any real augmentation of the Russian empire at the expense of the Sultan.

Ten thousand Piedmontese troops have already arrived before Sebastopol, and about 6,000 men are daily expected. Lord RAGLAN's force is now calculated at 35,000 effective. The Turkish force number 10,000 encamped near Balaklava, and 25,000 Turks and Egyptians, who commenced to arrive on the 19th, in exchange for the 10,000 who recrossed some days before for Eupatoria. The French army numbers 115,000 men. Thus the whole force of the Allies before Sebastopol amounts to about 200,000 men. It is said that, for operations in the field, about 91,000 of these will be detached—consisting of 60,000 French troops, 25,000 Turks, the whole of the Sardinian troops, and a part of the English army. These statistics are drawn up from data supplied before the starting of the Kertch expedition.

A letter from Constantinople of the 24th says: "Martial law proclaimed in the Principalities, and Bucharest in a state of siege, have produced at Constantinople a most painful effect. Count CORONINI acts precisely as if he was in a conquered country. Lord STRATFORD must now repent having urged the Porte to the Convention of the 15th June, which, as I have often told you, has been considered as a second treaty of Balta-Liman. It is said that a post will be created for RASCHID PASHA higher than that of Grand Vizier—namely, Lieutenant-General of the Empire. MEHEMET BEY is on the eve of leaving for Paris. VELY PASHA, late Ambassador in Paris, is also preparing to set out for his Government of Candia. Some changes are likely to take place in the Ministry, but not till after the Ramazan."

The Vienna papers publish a consular report from Varna, received by electric telegraph, according to which the number of the Allied troops landed at Kertch on the 24th ult., under Sir Geo. Brown, was 20,000. The advance on the Tchernaya effected on the same day, was made by 35,000 French. A private dispatch, also from Varna, states that the Allies are in possession of Tchorgoun, on the right bank of the river. Two Russian batteries and several battalions, detached from the north of Sebastopol, were advanced upon the Khutor Mackenzie road to support the retiring force.

The present ungenial Spring has been particularly fatal to the veteran warriors of France. The Moniteur announces the death of another in the following terms: "General of Division, Baron DURBETON, formerly a peer of France, Grand Officer of the Legion of Honor, Commander of St. Louis, died at Versailles on the 27th of May. A general of division in 1812, Baron DURBETON took a glorious part in the wars of the Empire. Our old army loses in him one of its most honorable representatives."

The young King of Portugal, as grandson of AUGUSTE EUGENE NAPOLEONE, Dowager Empress of the Brazils, widow of DON PEDRO, and daughter of Prince EUGENE BEAUHARNAIS, who was the brother of Queen HORTENSE, the mother of NAPOLEON III., is the cousin of the Emperor of the French, as he is through his father a nephew of Prince ALBERT, consort of the Queen of England.

It will be satisfactory to the world-wide circle of admirers of the heroic and devoted Miss NIGHTINGALE to learn that, though much weakened by her attack of fever, she is reported to be progressing favorably towards recovery. Miss NIGHTINGALE remains at the convalescent hospital above Balaklava, where, it need hardly be said, she receives every care that kind and considerate attention can bestow.

The Warsaw Gazette, in an account of the loss of the Russians in the affair of the 22d, mentions among the dead the name of General ADLERBERG, who commanded the second brigade of the 9th division of infantry.

The City of Paris is raising a loan of sixty millions of francs, payable finally after a period of forty years. The conditions are, that the loan shall be raised in 500 franc shares, issued at 400 francs, bearing interest at 3 per cent.

On the occasion of his visit to Cronstadt, the Emperor ALEXANDER received a deputation of burgesses. It was observed that in the course of his speech to them he said, "Pray God to give us peace; trade will then revive."

The authorities at Hamburg have imprisoned a British subject for enlisting recruits.

Sectionalism in the Army.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

An article in the TIMES of the 19th June states, that "of the thirty-four cadets composing the graduating class of the Military Academy at West Point, this year, there are but five from the Slave States," and "that this class started, it seems, four years ago, with fifty members, but the rigors of West Point discipline and the 'demerit' marks have reduced the number down to thirty-four. The Slave States must have had their full share of representatives in the class, and we are led to infer that the greater number of the missing members were from the other side of Mason and Dixon's line."

Whether it is the design of these sentences or not, to convey the idea that "the rigors of West Point discipline, and the 'demerit' marks," ordinarily cause so many to be missing who are "from the other side of Mason and Dixon's line," the public will probably conceive such an idea from the remarks.

A few words will prove that the South has its "full share of representatives" among the graduates of the Academy.

I have before me the Army Register of 1855. Excluding the Medical and the Pay Departments, in which we found few or none of the graduates, I find, by actual count, that there are about eight hundred officers in the army. Of this number, three-fifths were born in the Free, and two-fifths in the Slave States. Of the whole number, five-sixths, at least, are graduates of the Academy; the balance being made up of those promoted from civil life and from the ranks. This shows "a full share of representatives" from Slave States of those now in the service.

Again, the Register of Graduates of the Academy for the year 1850, shows that up to and including that year, fourteen hundred and forty-nine (1,449) cadets had graduated from the Academy. I deduct sixty-five (65) appointed "at large," whose places of birth and residence cannot be ascertained, and of the remainder I find that eight hundred and fifty-two (852) are graduates from the Free States, and five hundred and thirty-two (532) from the Slave States and the District of Columbia.

So it appears that rigors of discipline and demerit marks operate upon the representatives of all parts of the country alike, and that the class of the present year is anomalous in its character.

The army represents all sections, and in no other class is the community less a national feeling exist to such an extent as among those who serve as the defenders of their common country. F.

The Mysterious Murderess.

TROY, N. Y., Tuesday, June 19, 1855.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

You have probably seen, by this time, that Mrs. ROBINSON, "the veiled murderess," whose trial a year ago excited so much sensation throughout the country, has been actually sentenced. I hope, however, that, as an eye-witness of the whole scene—a scene combining so much of tragedy and comedy, and sitting within a few feet of her,—I can give you somewhat more full particulars than the telegraph or the newspaper reporter.

Judge HARRIS, who holds the present Circuit Court and Court of Oyer and Terminer, and who tried Mrs. ROBINSON in May, 1854, was disgusted with the morbid curiosity which was exhibited on that occasion, when high and low, rich and poor, of both sexes, thronged the Court-House to such an extent as to endanger its stability, and he determined not to gratify it. So he ordered the Sheriff to bring the unfortunate woman privately into Court this afternoon, only the District Attorney and the prisoner's counsel being notified, but

"On eagles' wings immortal scandal flies."

Was there ever yet a secret faithfully kept? Towards afternoon, nearly all the members of the bar and many citizens were aware of the fact; and as the hour of 3 approached there were quite a number of persons in the Court-House. At 3, Judge HARRIS took his seat upon the bench, and for fifteen minutes an intense and expectant silence prevailed throughout the Court-room. At 3½ o'clock, Mrs. ROBINSON was led in by Sheriff PRICE, and took a seat inside the bar, next her counsel, Mr. PIERSON. She was, as upon her former trial, well dressed—but not so richly and expensively as then. She walked in with a firm and buoyant step, and smilingly greeted her counsel. She wore but one thickness of veil, instead of three or four, as on the trial—and through that veil it was easy to see that she was very highly painted. "Will you sit down here," said the Sheriff, pointing to a chair. She seemed quite offended at being in the least degree hurried, and said, in a haughty and petulant tone, that they must wait till she got ready. She then sat down and amused herself—laughing, looking around the Court and talking, and appeared quite pleased with her situation.

The District Attorney then moved that sentence of death be passed upon HENRIETTA ROBINSON, which brought forth a fresh series of smiles and laughter from her. Mr. PIERSON then inquired about the disposition of a motion made last Saturday, to change the record in some particulars, and that being settled, said he had done all God had given him the power for this woman; he thought she should have a new trial, the Supreme Court thought otherwise; he should do no more.

The Judge then requested Mrs. ROBINSON to remove her veil, which she did apparently quite willingly, exposing to view a countenance, which, it was evident, had once been beautiful. The Judge asked her if she had anything to say why sentence of death should not be pronounced upon her. She said, interrupting him before he got through the sentence, and as if she had something laid up, which was now coming out, "Yes, a great deal to say, but I do not wish to be interrupted; I have been the victim of a conspiracy of you politicians at Albany," and much more of the same strain, when she was quieted by her counsel, and the Judge proceeded: "You have been convicted of the murder of TIMOTHY LANAGAN." "Yes! and upon false evidence! Shame! Judge, Shame!" "If you would hear me," said the Judge—"Oh, Yes, I'll hear you"—"I would advise you to cease battling with your fate, but submit to it like a true woman; but as you will not hear me, it only remains for me to pass upon you the sentence of the law, which is, that you be confined in the County prison until the 3d day of August next, upon which day, between the hours of 10 A. M. and 4 P. M. you be hanged by the neck until dead; and may God, in his infinite goodness, have mercy on your soul." While the Judge was saying, "You be hanged by the neck until dead," Mrs. ROBINSON very coolly drew her hand across her throat, and said: "A very pretty throat for a halter, isn't it, Judge?" And when he had finished, she told him, "he had better pray for his own soul." The serio-comic scene being finished, the Sheriff went up to her to remove her to the jail, when she indignantly ordered him to wait until she was ready, and commenced abusing the Judge, Sheriff, and a portion of her counsel, until quieted by Mr. PIERSON. She was then removed, but as she turned to go, she said, in a commanding voice and with a proud glance, "May the Judge of Judges thus deal with you," and departed to her carriage, the crowd which would have followed being detained until she had gone.

I never witnessed so strange a combination of the sublime and the ridiculous; the dignified and majestic tone of the Judge, and the silly yet passionate behavior of the prisoner. Will she ever be hung in still in doubt—or will the Executive interpose. It remains, however, in the dim future.

Yours truly, PEN AND INK.

Brazil.

Our advices from Rio de Janeiro, by way of Europe, are to the 26th of April, and from Pernambuco to May 5.

At Rio de Janeiro it was generally believed the Paraná Cabinet would quit office as soon as the Ministers could lay before the Chambers, which were to assemble on the 3d of May, the reports of the different departments; but there was no certainty as to the party who would be intrusted with the formation of a new Cabinet.

Capitalists were preparing to take shares in the new Railroad projected to the interior, under Government guarantee of 7 per cent, but it appeared probable the different plans afloat for improvements in Brazil would exceed the capital obtainable, and that some of them were likely to receive a temporary check.

Viscount ITABORAHY, the founder of the Bank of Brazil, had been appointed President of that establishment, which had contracted its circulation and increased the tightness of the Money market.

Coffee had been nominal after the departure of the last steamer until the 10th of April, when business opened at a decline upon previous rates, and the market became active. 103,000 bags had been sold—viz.: 67,000 for the United States, 31,000 for Channel, &c.; and 7,000 for the Mediterranean, at 46s. 3d. washed; superior, 44s.; first good, 40s. 4d.; first ordinary, 36s. 3d.; second good, 35s. 3d.; these rates being for the best of each sort put on board. In Sugar and Hides transactions had been too limited to require particular mention.

At Pernambuco import and export business continued very dull. Sugars had come in but slowly, and prices of the better grades of whites and muscovadoes kept very high. The demand was principally for France and the native Southern ports.

By the arrival of the brig Mary A. Ferrett, at Baltimore, we have advices from Rio to the 6th of May, eight days later than the above.

Flour was rather quiet at the latest dates. A sale of 500 barrels, Baltimore brands, was noted at 25 milreis. The supply on hand was light, and it was believed the necessities of bakers, unless relief mutually increased, would cause them to pay higher prices.

Advices from the United States in the 16th of March, noting an advance in coffee in this country, had produced decided firmness in the article, and dealers at Rio were looking towards higher figures.

No sales, however, had taken place. A cargo of superior qualities would not have been purchased under 4,500 rials to 5,000 rials. Exchange 27½.

Freights were dull, but had an improving tendency.

No other commercial news of moment.

Political affairs were without special moment or any very striking features.

The present Ministry, it is asserted, shows a deficit in the finances or revenue of over five million milreas.

There was considerable suffering from the great scarcity of labor. In the neighborhood of 1,800 reas were being paid per day to Coolies for their daily services to work on public roads, to whom only 400 reas were previously given to perform similar service.

The supply of all kinds of lumber was increasing, and the market for it dull.

The health of the country was generally good.

FROM KANSAS.

Correspondence of the Republican.

WESTERNER, K. T., Saturday, June 9, 1855.

Mr. HENRY SMITH has just informed us that a man stopped at his house this morning, who told him that he slept at the Great Nemaha Mission last night, with an Express rider, who brought startling news from the Plains. It was to the effect that Fort Laramie was in the hands of the Indians, and that Messrs. NAYE and McCORD, of Andrew County, Mo., had been robbed, at Ash Hollow, of four hundred and twenty head of cattle, sixteen horses, several wagons, twenty-three mules, and all their stores and provisions, and were left entirely destitute. The particulars of the capture of Laramie were not given. The Express merely stated that the Indians had gathered there in great force, and had taken the Fort, and that, as he came by Ash Hollow, on his way into the States, he saw Messrs. NAYE and McCORD and their teamsters and drivers, who were without horses or food, and stated to him the fact of the robbery, and that no lives were lost. This news has occasioned great excitement here and in St. Joseph.

If it is true, the small force of infantry that has just started out will only afford to the Indians so many scalps. They can offer no more resistance to two thousand warriors upon the plains, than could an infant to a giant.

I have always contended, and am sustained in my view by every frontier man, that the Government should have employed some two or three regiments of Western volunteers for this service, and appointed officers to the command who had some experience of the plains and mountains, and the Indians; such I mentioned Col. D. D. MITCHELL, of St. Louis, as a gentleman eminently qualified to lead the expedition. They would have gone out understandingly, and if they found it necessary to fight, they would know how to do it effectively, by outriding the Indians, cutting them off from the buffalo, and allowing them no time to recuperate themselves or their horses.

The Indians carry no stores with them, and depend upon the chances of each day for their "daily bread," and can fight as long as they roam with the buffalo, and no infantry can cut them off. Western men, mounted on good horses, and armed with rifles, and who are familiar with their habits and modes of warfare, would pursue and hunt them down, and whip them into submission at a saving of many lives and much treasure to the country. If they found it advisable to make peace with them, they would understand the best terms on which to predicate their treaty.

To send infantry to the plains is the veriest nonsense in the world. Those who do so are eminently culpable, and should be held responsible for the consequences. The Indians and all frontier men laugh at the idea. It would only afford amusement to the Indians to whip infantry for the next twelve years. Such fighting would be comparative repose to them. Well mounted volunteers are the only people that they fear, and it is the only force that can bring them to speedy terms, and secure a lasting and reliable peace.

One of the most bold and reckless attempts at murder occurred on the Polar Star on last Thursday morning, that has ever been known in the experience of steamboat men. I have received the facts from the intended victim, and will give them as he related them to me. Mr. TRACY, of New Orleans, a dealer in West India fruits, left there for St. Louis on business, and thence came on to see his relations in St. Joseph. Before leaving the levee at New Orleans, he received some parcels of money, one of which amounted to $6,000, and the others to $5,000, making in all $11,000. A man calling himself MANYPENNY, from the Gascoade, some eighteen miles below Jefferson City, Mo., was standing near at the time.

On the way to St. Louis, MANYPENNY made himself very agreeable, and tried to cultivate an intimacy with TRACY. He found that TRACY intended coming up the Missouri River, and he stated that he too was coming up nearly as far as Jefferson City, and would be glad to have his company. TRACY said, however, that he would not come up for several days, and as they parted at the Levee in St. Louis. A few days after, MANYPENNY called at the private house at which TRACY was stopping, and said that he had concluded to spend several days in the city, and he urged TRACY to to walk out with him. TRACY was busy, and excused himself. He called several times for TRACY to go with him to the theatre, or to see the curiosities about the city, but each time TRACY had some other engagement.

At length, when she was ready to come up the river, he went on the Polar Star, and found his name registered with MANYPENNY's for the same stateroom. The room was the farthest back in the gentlemen's, and adjoining the ladies' cabin. TRACY felt rather grateful to MANYPENNY for his attention. They came up to the landing for which MANYPENNY was registered, when, in consequence of the rain which was then pouring down, he said he would go on to Jefferson City. When they got to Jefferson City, he said he had heard that Boonville was the prettiest town in the State, and he would come up and see it. When they got to Boonville, he said that a man who owed him some money was in Lexington, and that he could get it by going for it. This awakened TRACY's suspicion that all was not right. He began to think that MANYPENNY might want to rob him; but the thought of murder never entered his head.

That night, MANYPENNY, who occupied the upper berth, got up three or four times, and went into the cabin; but persons were stirring about until daylight. About 4 o'clock on Thursday morning, while all was quiet about the cabin and state rooms, MANYPENNY got up and went out again. TRACY concluded that he would get up then, as he discovered daylight. While he thought of doing so, he fell into a slumber. The first thing he knew was a sensation like a horrible nightmare, which was occasioned by a blow on the top of the head. He received another blow on the forehead, which laid it open to the bone, and brought him to consciousness. He found himself grappling with MANYPENNY, and warding off with his arm, blows aimed at his head with a bar of iron, and he called for help. Before assistance came MANYPENNY escaped through the outer door, taking with him only his coat and pantaloons, and slipped down on the lower deck and jumped overboard. Some say he got safely to shore, but the porter says he saw him fall back and sink, and that he is sure he was drowned.

TRACY was brought to St. Joseph this morning, and is doing well. He has a gash on the top of his head some three inches long, and one on the forehead nearly the same length, and several bruises on his arm. His greatest suffering is in the region of the left ear, though there is no visible wound there.

MANYPENNY left his hat, vest and boots. In one of his vest pockets was found a worn piece of paper, with "——— opening the Gascoade ——— times, ——— dollars and ——— cents." The numbers could not be read, but it will afford a clue to his identity, by inquiring at the different crossings of the Gascoade.

MANYPENNY is here six feet high, with black hair and blue eyes, and has something like a ringworm on one cheek, and appears to be about 30 years of age.

There is nothing stirring in our territory of general interest. We are anxiously looking forward to the meeting of our Legislature. It is difficult to tell where it will meet, as Fawnee is on an Indian reservation, and Gov. REEDER is not here to designate another place. The Secretary, if it is left to him, will call it at the Mission below Leavenworth. The Kansas-Nebraska bill established Fort Leavenworth the temporary seat of Government, and I know of nothing that gives to REEDER authority to alter it. T.

Interesting Letter from C. McOrem—His Reasons for Shooting Clark—Letter to his Father.

From the Chicago Tribune, June 18.

We publish to-day a letter from McOREM, now confined at Fort Leavenworth on a charge of murder in killing MALCOLM CLARK, a border ruffian who participated largely in the Kansas outrages. McOREM writes like a man of pluck. The letter is addressed to Mr. Charles REVERSEY, merchant, Dubuque, Iowa, his father-in-law, and was not intended for publication.

LEAVENWORTH, KANSAS, Thursday, May 24, 1855.

DEAR FATHER: We here received, day before yesterday, the 20th ult., the telegraph dispatch of the 7th inst., and the news, we have heard, are of the warmest, for which we are very grateful to all parties concerned.

Some eight days after date your dispatch came to hand, but we had not such as to speak to each one time of trouble. Poor E——— was taken prepared for the sweeping blows to leave her husband in trouble involving his life. She bears up well, but is in a very low state of health.

You know, doubtless, looked for the particulars of the cause of my shooting CLARK, which, without taking notice of a rumored affront to my wife, while boarding at the house of said CLARK, was first known to the country, I will give you in detail; and first, to what I suppose to be the real cause of his attack upon me. CLARK was a slaveholder, today, and one of those border ruffians who took our election last Spring by force of arms; and I put in the challenge to the only chance in which the minions of Slavery were defeated, and paid, dearly for it. CLARK, with a dozen other BORDER RUFFIANS, who have not yet returned, followed me from his own house, taken from a Missourian, and my hand shaved, hacked and [illegible] to the ground, and then upon a rail, then sold at auction by a negro for four cents, although a lawyer and in every way a good citizen and man of means, instead being a lot of twenty, only about eight months from Missouri, assaults and that was not all that was intended for me and FREESTAD.

It was concerted to take him out of his bed, and, by having a position in a tall-room the night after the report of the Governor's doubtful arrival, when FREESTAD entered, with his wife. His pistol missed the mark, and he was then shot down by the Missourians, who were present, to take our lives. At this (I could serve with safety, I want to be [illegible] him, and advised him to go quiet; and, [illegible] natural demonstration was given, could, from time to time, see the face of the man who had [illegible] and to was this which made me [illegible] the crowd when CLARK commenced to shoot me, as will appear below.

The meeting at which the affair took place was called under the influence of the Missourians, to extend the time given by mob law for non-residents (Missourians) for making a peaceful arrangement upon their claims, which they in reality never intended to do, but merely to speculate upon and have from time to time, and persons from the North, all of whom are [illegible] upon by commissioners with hatred. These meetings had commonly been largely represented by Missourians, but this time the actual settlers had a large majority. Proceeding thus, these Missouri ruffians determined to carry their points by force.

A Judge WILSON was called to the Chair, who, under the pretense of explaining the object of the meeting, delivered an abusive and [illegible] speech against every person who was not Southern State, the Governor coming in for a share, by way of [illegible] with his pageant; nor did there wide disposition to oppose the friends of the free elections, by [illegible] escape his notice; he of [illegible] but, knowing that a plot was laid for me, and that I stood not alone the previous speaker, without [illegible] ing any comment for him and his cause, which proved to be the signal for an attack upon me. I [illegible] forward, and called upon a man whom I [illegible] to EASTON. He made a speech, but so long [illegible] and so much in keeping with his predecessor. He stood, and the crowd would take no denial, but pushed me forward.

As I went forward to the stand in the grounds back, it being out of doors, I thought there was something wrong in these revolves swarming to the inside of the circle, and getting one party to the outside; but I went on slowly till near the box. CLARK, otherwise called the Platte County bully, met me, and said in a savage manner, "Go back; you d——d——n Abolition son of a b——h shall speak in this meeting." Knowing that the object was intended to provoke some resent from me, I went back without saying a word. I then thought that I could preserve that he had been [illegible] and disappointed. I was on the extreme outside of the crowd, believing that I should not be molested till the business of the meeting was over, and then intending to get out of the way of trouble.

A vote was soon called, and taken, which, by the voice, appeared to be against the Missourian interest, but was decided by the chair (a Missourian) the reverse. A division was then called from among voters, the division showed two to one for the opposition, but was still decided by the chairman against the minority. I then, turning towards Mr. EASTON, who stood near me, [illegible] to go off along with him, said, in disgust, "What a rascally fraud! where being convinced of fraud by CLARK, he muttered, "You can go if you dare, you d——d son of a b——h, and I'll kill you." Upon this, I, if in the act of [illegible] remarked, which I could not tell the meaning of, [illegible] I then said Mr. EASTON not to get hot his [illegible] and I should try to do the same, and walked nearly down hill and the newer about thirty feet, before CLARK and attempt; then he ran upon me at full speed, [illegible] door, [illegible] and [illegible] I could get out of his way, he gave me a glancing blow with a piece of a two-by-four scantling, which I managed to dodge; but by the time I got started to get away, he gave me a glancing blow, which nearly stunned me. I [illegible] fractured my collar bone, [illegible] the [illegible] I could survive, and as soon as I could rise, I [illegible] Third time, and was about as dead as another blow, while another

THE NORMAL SCHOOLS.

Exercises upon Graduation—Group Painting in the Tabernacle.

The exhibition of the Male and Female Normal Schools, given last evening at the Broadway Tabernacle, was one of unusual interest. Long before the hour announced for the exercises to begin, the house was densely crowded with the friends of those who were to participate more immediately in the exercises of the evening, besides a large attendance of friends and patrons of education generally.

The central seats were allotted to the young ladies of the Female Normal School, numbering some seven hundred in all. In their uniform dress of white, each bearing a bouquet of tastefully-arranged flowers, they presented a spectacle most beautiful and charming. The members of the Male School, embracing only about sixty in number, were seated in front of the side range of gallery, on either side.

The house was now a perfect jam, every position commanding place below to the furthest recesses of the gallery being competed with spectators. Upon the stage temporarily erected for the occasion, at the time for the exercises to commence, we observed ex-Gov. SEYMOUR, WM. H. NELSON, President of the Board of Education, ROBERT KELLY, Esq., ex-President of the Board, Dr. WHEWELL, President of the Free Academy, Prof. DAVIES, JAMES E. BARKER, Esq., PETER COOPER, Esq., the Superintendents of Schools, and numerous other eminent friends of popular education.

Mr. NELSON, President of the Board of Education, rose and said: He announced the opening exercise, a voluntary upon the organ, by Mr. G. F. BENGROW. Reading of the Scriptures and prayer, by Rev. A. STEPHEN HART, followed, when a hymn, expressly prepared for the occasion, was sung. The Voluntary was executed with much effect, and warmly applauded.

Mr. NELSON next delivered the address—which we published on Wednesday morning—and in the course of the delivery was interrupted with frequent applause.

A duet, "Come where the Violets Blow," followed upon conclusion of the address. It was sung by the Misses MARIE N. VAN ZANDT and S. VICTORIA WALSH, and was executed with much taste and discrimination.

An ode followed by WM. J. KENNARD, Subject: "Pure Patriotism necessarily allied to Sound Education," which was only disfigured by a trite allusion to ancient Greece and Rome. There was considerable energy shown in its delivery, however, and its general impression was good.

A song—"Love launched a fairy boat," by Miss JANE E. CUNNINGHAM, next given, was received with favor.

A composition was now read on "Female Education," by Miss FRANCES E. A. GUTCH. The importance of the education of females was set forth in a natural form. The facilities it afforded woman to fill with higher dignity the varied positions she was called to take in life, were ably exposed.

A chorus—"Violets, blue violets,"—followed, sung by the pupils in concert. The combined voices were unusually harmonious for the number, and showed careful training.

An ode—"The Pond,"—by GEO. W. HARRISON, was next given. It was an effective tribute to the power of the Press and well delivered. A free press and a free people were declared inseparable.

Another duet—"Moonlight Music,"—by Misses JOSEPHINE RODGERS and S. VICTORIA WALSH, followed. Its execution and beauty of the music alike was justly received with enthusiastic approbation.

A composition—on the subject of "Novel Reading," by Miss CAROLINE APPERSON—showed a proper appreciation of the pernicious effects of novel reading. Young ladies, as possessing more susceptible imaginations and more easily influenced than the opposite sex, were urged with strong emphasis and feeling to beware the interdiction of fiction.

A Chorus—"Now the wind is blowing fresh and fast,"—was sung well, and with distinctness.

An Oration—"Improvement of the Physical Powers," by SYLVESTER G. PENFIELD,—came next on the programme. No education was declared finished unless the bones and muscles were properly trained, and the body equally educated with the mind.

Miss S. VICTORIA WALSH sang effectively the solo—"The Harp that once through Tara's Hall."

A composition, entitled, "Early Impressions," from the pen of Miss MARY FLANAGAN, was admirably read by one of the teachers, Mr. JOHN FANNING. It elicited much applause.

Miss JANE E. CUNNINGHAM and Miss MARIE U. VAN ZANDT sang very pleasingly the duet—"Why do you watch the lone, lone deep."

The oratorios, "Our Country," by GEO. W. STEWART, and by Mr. JACOB FERRMANN, on "The Character of the Early Settlers," were up to the average quality and character.

A composition by Miss CLARA M. EDMONDS, entitled "The Poet's Death," was much relished.

OGDEN W. MOREN followed on the nobility and responsibility of the Teacher's vocation.

A little more music, and then came the ceremony of the presentation of the diplomas. Thirty-nine young ladies of the Female Normal School, and six young gentlemen of the Male Normal School, in succession passed before the Chair and received their diplomas. Following are the NAMES OF GRADUATES.

Male Normal School.—Jacob Fuhrmann, George W. Harrison, William J. Kennard, Charles W. Morse, Sylvester G. Penfield, George W. Stewart.

Female Normal School.—Caroline H. Appleton, Josephine Bailey, Louisa Barton, Mary E. Clark, Eleanor H. Cleveland, A. Augusta Dayton, Mary E. Flanagan, Charlotte E. Gibson, Frances E. A. Gutch, Phebe A. Hoyt, Jane A. Hunter, Mary Houseworth, Nancy E. Hoyt, Henrietta Hull, Elizabeth F. King, Mary J. King, Laura H. Lent, Sarah A. Love, Agnes McFarland, M. Jane Mapelsden, Mary J. Reed, Helen G. Morgan, Hannah Maria Morgan, Sarah E. Morgan, Emily Oakley, Mary Jane Pangborn, Sarah E. Sandold, Sarah Stewart, Charlotte M. Stoddard, Emma M. Sweeny, Esther B. Thompson.

After this, ex-Governor SEYMOUR addressed the audience. He was welcomed with a loud burst of applause. After a few introductory observations, in reference to his recent travels, he said that nothing offered him so much in his course, as finding, even in the remotest districts in Wisconsin, that there was a recognition of the value of education, and one of the first buildings erected was a school-house. Mr. SEYMOUR, directing his attention to those who had just graduated, gave them some excellent hints for the guidance of their future career. It was not necessary they should endeavor to make men merely successful in the vulgar sense, they had a higher mission—to make them noble and deserving of their own self-respect. There were evils which no human legislation could reach. Its resources were over-burdened, but education was progressive, and accumulative for good in all its results.

The lady graduates then sang a chorale entitled "Pudnauil Song." The melody was simple, and the effect exceedingly touching.

It was now 11 o'clock, and shortly afterwards the meeting broke up.

Sunday School Teachers' Association.

This Association met on Monday evening, at Andrew's Church, and was one of the largest and best meetings of this flourishing Institution. The discussion of the best practical modes of organizing and conducting Teachers' meetings, gave Messrs. TUCKER, ALDEN, CHAMBERS, BARNES, LONG, LANE, CHAMBERS, WILSON and PARDEE, of New-York, and Messrs. BRIGGS and NEWCOMB, of the Brooklyn Union, the opportunity of offering many interesting facts and principles. The discussion of the last three meetings was summed up by the Secretary. Forty-six schools were represented. Messrs. CHENEY, MCCARTER and BOURNE were appointed delegates to the Brooklyn Union.

New-York Horticultural Society—Address of Dr. Osgood.

Yesterday, despite of the rain, which deterred from the exhibition the better half of its loveliness, the June exhibition of this Association took place at Clinton Hall, Astor-place. Publicity had been given to the opinion of the managers that a "favorable juncture having presented itself, the Society had determined to augment its monthly June exhibitions, and threw it open to the public at a low charge for admission. This was proposed instead of the usual semi-annual exhibition."

A stringed and wind band (not a brass band) discoursed such delicate music as was befitting the atmosphere of flowers, and if the attendance, owing to the weather, was somewhat scanty in the afternoon, the enjoyment to those present was the greater from the absence of the discomforts of a crowded room. At 3 o'clock it was sufficiently crowded. Our attention, on entering, was instantly riveted by a curious and beautiful plant from Demerara with purple and yellow flowers—the air plant named "Coryanthes Macula," an epiphytal orchid. There was also another of the same class from Central America; also, a curious plant, a native of Chili, Lilocedana Chilensis—these were contributed by the brothers Hoge, of Yorkville. Among the very curious things is a plant, named Cissus Discolor, contributed by J. H. PRENTICE, Esq., of Brooklyn; also, the visitor will have noticed a magnificent Azalia, in full bloom, forwarded by Mrs. HOLBROOK, of Union-square. There was also a modest and beautiful variety of Auraucaria, contributed by Mr. ALFRED BRIDGMAN.

Our attention was next arrested by some very fine grapes labeled "two bunches of Cannon Hall Muscat green grapes." These were particularly large and fine, as were also some bunches of Hamburg Black grapes. These were contributed by Mr. WM. CHORLTON, the gardener of J. C. GREEN, Esq., of Staten Island. The vines which produced them were planted two years ago last March, and were a year old when planted. Last year the whole house bore an average of five bunches, equal in size and quality to those exhibited. This year the average is nine bunches to each vine. This enthusiastic cultivator is the author of a little work entitled The Cold Grapery, and his impression seems to be that under proper management the cultivation of the vine in America is susceptible of being made an exceedingly profitable investment. The house he superintends at Staten Island has been planted since March, 1850, and he has now the fifth crop upon it, and the vines are every year growing larger and stronger, proving that with proper skill much remains to be done profitably in the culture of the vine in this country.

The strawberries were very fine, especially those marked "Hovey's Seedling" and "Longworth's Prolific."

As to the flowers, the rose justly maintained her queenly reputation, there being no fewer than 3,500 specimens of this beautiful flower, contributed chiefly by Mr. Mare, of Astoria, Long Island; Mr. Donardie, of Astoria; Messrs. Boll, Bridgeman, Buchanan, Durandie, Mare, Cranstown, Weir, Muir and other well known cultivators.

Mr. HOGE was one of the Committee of Arrangements, and such being the case his collection of plants was not offered for competition.

PREMIUMS.

The following is a list of the premiums awarded by the judges, Messrs. WOOD, ELLIS and GRIFFING:

PLANTS IN POTS.—For best collection of Fuchsias, premium of $5, awarded to David Scott, gardener to Mrs. Holbrook, Eighteenth-street. Best single specimen plant in bloom awarded to David Scott, as above. Special premium of $3 to Martin Calloy, gardener to J. H. Prentice, Esq., Brooklyn. This prize is for the Gloxia Speciosa, near the door.

BEDDING PLANTS.—Premium of $3 to J. Little, for a fancy Pelargonium. Premium of $1 to Mr. Cranstown for 6 Seedling Antheririum. Premium of $2 to D. Boll, Forty-ninth-street, for best Seedling Verbena. Diploma to James Weir, Gowanus, for second best Seedling Verbena.

ROSES.—Best collection premium of $6 awarded to Mr. Donardi, Astoria, Long Island. Second best collection, premium of $3 to A. Boll, Forty-ninth-street. For best 24 roses, premium of $2 awarded to Mr. G. Mare, Astoria, L. I. For second best 24, $2 to Mr. D. Mare, Astori, L. I. For best 12 roses, premium of $2 to Mr. Donardi. Second best dozen, $1 to Mr. Mare.

Among Hardy Herbaceous Plants, premium of $5 awarded to J. Hewitt, gardener to Mr. A. Bridgeman of Astoria. Second best, $3 to Mr. Cranstown, gardener to —— Stevens, Esq., of Hoboken.

VERBENAS.—Best collection premium of $3 awarded to W. & J. Park, Brooklyn. Second best, $2 to James Weir, L. I.

BOUQUETS.—Best pair of hand bouquets, premium of $5, awarded to J. Cranstown, gardener to —— Stevens, Esq., Hoboken. Second best, $3—to Mr. O'Connor. Best parlor bouquet, $5—to Mr. Weir, of Gowanus. Second best, $3—to Mr. Wilson, of Fourteenth-street, New-York.

BASKETS OF FLOWERS.—First prize, $5—to J. Weir, Long Island. Second prize, to W. & J. Park, Brooklyn.

FLORAL DESIGN.—Special premium of $2 awarded to George Saul, gardener to Shepherd Knapp, Esq., of Washington Heights.

The Judge made also favorable mention of two seedling roses from Mr. Cranstown.

Signed by the Committee, J. W. WOOD,
JOHN ELLIS,
SAMUEL GRIFFING.

FRUITS.—Strawberries—To Dr. J. M. Ward, of Newark, for best collection of Strawberries, $5. To J. Bayelyn, Astoria, for the best quart of "Longworth's Prolific" Strawberry, the first prize of $3. To Ed. Decker, gardener to S. D. Jones, Staten Island, for second best quart, $2.

Gooseberries—To Wm. Cairns, Newark, N. J., for best quart of Gooseberries, $2. To Ed. Decker, Gardener to S. D. Jones, Staten Island, for the second best quart, $1.

Grapes—To Wm. Chorlton, gardener to J. C. Green, Esq., Staten Island, for the best four bunches of hot house Grapes, of two kinds, the first prize of $5. To Wm. Chorlton, as above, for the best two bunches of one kind of Grapes, $3.

Signed by the Judges, C. MORE,
JOHN LATTIE,
R. BULLAN.

REMARKS OF WILSON G. HUNT, ESQ.

WILSON G. HUNT, Esq., ascended the platform and said: In behalf of the New-York Horticultural Society, I would present their thanks to the gentlemen amateurs and gardeners for the rich display of fruits and flowers before us. We look upon this as a token of good for the future success of this enterprise. It is not our purpose, ladies and gentlemen, to make these exhibitions a source of pecuniary profit; far from it. We have higher and holier objects in view. We want to make our citizens familiar with the science of Horticulture, to love that which is perfect—the flower as it comes from the hand of the Maker; to cultivate in the minds of our citizens a taste for this most chaste and elevating occupation. It has been said that youth is the season of flowers. We want the young to be interested, and make horticulture the companion of books and music. With a little attention every family may have some choice plants and bouquets in Winter and Summer. I received from a friend a few days since, residing in a neighboring city, a beautiful bouquet containing some choice and rare flowers, which are contained within the limits of 100 feet by 25, of which 60 feet are covered by a dwelling. The speaker returned the thanks of the Society to the members of the New-York Mercantile Library Association, and Young Men's Christian Association, for the assistance rendered by them in promoting the exhibition, and concluded by referring to the facilities afforded by the Society for gratifying and developing a taste for horticultural pursuits.

He descended amid warm applause.

Mr. PETER B. MEAD, the Secretary, read a long and highly interesting letter from W. CULLEN BRYANT, Esq., the gentleman with whom arrangements had been made for the delivery of an address on the present occasion, but who was unavoidably detained by illness. It was as follows:

LETTER FROM WM. C. BRYANT.

NEW-YORK, Tuesday, June 19, 1855.

MY DEAR SIR: May I ask of you to lay before the company assembled this evening in the rooms occupied by the Exhibition of the Horticultural Society my apology for not appearing to address them as I had engaged to do? For some days past I have suffered with a swelled face, which had prevented me from presenting myself for the occasion in the manner I wished, and which unfits me for appearing to-day.

It had been my wish to adorn your table of fruits with a remarkable triumphs of horticulture in heightening the beauty of flowers and improving the quality of fruits, and thence to draw encouragement for those who follow this pursuit in our own country. The favorite varieties of cherry in France and England decay for the most part the instant they ripen in the warm and often showery weather of our June and the beginning of July, and we have yet to acquire varieties suited to our climate which will preserve their freshness a reasonable time after maturity. The apricot blossoms are so often nipped by the Spring frosts that they can never be relied on to produce fruit, and we have yet to inquire whether more hardy or at least later blooming varieties could not be found on the declivities of Lebanon, or further North on the skirts of Canaseraga, which are in some places covered in large tracts with apricot-trees.

I intended to have given some hints from my own observation to show that the grape of Europe in its natural state is not by any means the agreeable fruit which we find it in the cultivated varieties. From these and from the tendency of our native grape to run into innumerable varieties, I thought it might be reasonably expected that we should yet produce, on vines of a hardier and more luxuriant growth, native grapes in every respect rivaling those of the Old World. I meant to show how the American gooseberry naturally paints into varieties very different from each other, and from this to infer the improvability of the fruit to such a degree that we might hope to produce it of as large a size and as fine a flavor as that of England, yet free from the mildew which attacks the English gooseberry in our climate.

The fruit of the American blackberry is naturally of a finer flavor than the European, and greatly varies in quality even in the fields. We may yet have as many varieties of this fruit as of the raspberry. No attempt, I believe, has been made to improve the fruit of the American plum, whether the Chickasaw, the red or the beach plum, while the art of the gardener has been exhausted in obtaining from the plum of the Old World varieties more remarkably different in size and flavor, from the little mirabelle, of the size of a bullet, to the magnum bonum, being in dimensions with the peach. If the mulberry-tree of the West had been a native of Europe, can we suppose it would not have been brought into the gardens centuries ago, cultivated with care, rendered prolific, improved in size and flavor, and made a common table fruit in its season?

One of the most splendid of garden flowers is the pansy. Its parent is the little three-colored violet of Europe, pretty, but too small to be conspicuous. By crossing it with other species of the violet and pampering the hybrid plant, a dazzling combination of glowing colors has been produced; its petals have become tall and the petals broad. We have among the flowers of our own fields a little white violet of intense fragrance. By the same process of hybridisation it is probable that its size might be enlarged and its fragrance retained, and a new ornament be added to our gardens.

We have other beautiful flowers in our forests and fields for which art has yet done nothing to make their bloom less transient. In the prairies of the West flourish bulbous plants worthy of a place on our window-sills in March, with the hyacinth and the Syrian anemone.

These are some of the topics on which I intended to dwell, and I mention them now because it seems to me that as suggestions of what may yet be accomplished in horticulture, they may be considered as not entirely without value.

I am, Sir, respectfully and truly yours,
To WILSON G. HUNT, Esq. W. C. BRYANT.

DR. OSGOOD'S ADDRESS.

Rev. Dr. OSGOOD was then conducted to the platform amid loud applause.

In this world of sharp corners, and sometimes of acute feelings, he said, he had done some good-natured things, but none more good-natured than presenting himself on this occasion, when WM. CULLEN BRYANT was expected to be the speaker. He was sure that not only the audience, but even the very flowers, regretted that gentleman's absence. [Applause.]

He (the speaker) remembered once to have read in the Persian poet HAFIZ the story "that the poet once went into the garden and saw what he thought a clod there, but the clod was very fragrant. Said the poet, 'What is this? are you musk, or are you amber, that you are so fragrant?' 'Oh no, poet, I am nothing but earth, but the roses have dwelt near me, and their sweetness has penetrated all my being.'" [Applause.] So then he asked to be listened to, although he might be the clod among flowers. Who, however, could be so adequate to speak on the subject of flowers as he who had been appointed to address them to-night; and whose poetry exhibited such a genuine appreciation of nature in his frequent allusions to flowers? Old, cent-per-cent. in Wall-street himself could hardly fail to be softened by such an exhibition. In GOETHE'S Faust the story was told of Faust having sold his soul to "Mephistopheles," the devil, on condition that he would satisfy him. But the effort was all in vain.

The time never came when the student could say, "Let the hand of dull sleep press upon me; I have had enough." He took him through an unlimited career of pleasure, but all in vain, until at last Faust turned to being useful. Still Mephistopheles claimed him. And the time of his death came, and he was robed for the grave. There stood this grand undertaker looking out for his soul, but he was baffled. He heard sweet music from the heavens, and a shower of roses fell. Satan laughed at this. Pretty soon, however, he grew alarmed. He felt that he, himself, was being affected, and he was constrained to hold his nostrils and put his hands in his ears, lest he should be overcome, and the devil should no longer be the devil. Such was the influence which flowers could be made to exert on the most hardened feelings, for a flower went directly to the heart—its language was not that of books, but a language written in the hieroglyphs of Nature itself. They taught us that God made life to be lovely as well as useful. He believed that we Americans—for he thought a great deal of being American—if we tried to be something else than what we were, would only make ourselves ridiculous. If we tried to be counts and dukes we became neither Americans, nor counts, nor dukes, nor anything at all. With this creed he believed in a noble future for Americans in respect to social refinement and to beautiful tastes. After paying a feeling tribute to the memory of Mr. DOWNING, the eloquent speaker concluded by saying, let us believe not merely in simple flowers, but those kind charities that heal and bless, of which they are the expressive emblems. When Christ came first on earth he was crowned with thorns; when he comes anew in the triumph of a true humanity, give him, oh, give him, a crown of roses. [Loud and enthusiastic applause.]

Mr. MEAD again ascended the platform, and in behalf of the Society and the audience, presented the orator with the prize bouquet amid renewed and loud applause.

The list of prizes was then read, and the proceedings closed.

Meeting of the Board of Governors.

A meeting of the Ten Governors was held at the Lunatic Asylum, Blackwell's Island, at 4 o'clock on Tuesday. Present—Governors DRAPER, DUKE, WEST, DUGRO, TIEMANN, TAYLOR and HENRY.

Governor DRAPER presided on the occasion.

A resolution was adopted, that the first and third Wednesday of each month be hereafter known as the visiting days at the Lunatic Asylum on Blackwell's Island, on which days alone, except by special permission of some member of the Board, or of the Resident Physician or the Superintendent of the Out-Door Poor, shall persons be allowed to visit said Institution.

A communication was received from Mr. ELRIDGE, Superintendent of the Workhouse, tendering his resignation of that office to the Governors, because parties who had been committed for thirty days had been frequently released before the expiration of their term of committal, on writs of habeas corpus, in consequence of some informality, or other illegal proceedings. A contract had been entered into with Mr. CHAPMAN for the making of razor strops, daguerreotype cases, and port monnaies; but unless the parties gave thirty days' service, the contractor was not bound to pay for the labor performed, and it frequently happened that persons had been liberated after working five, ten, fifteen, twenty-five and sometimes twenty-seven days. The Institution, therefore, lost the benefit of their services, and hence Mr. ELRIDGE concludes that the experiment would become a failure, and he accordingly tendered his resignation of the position which he has held since 1849. He wished the Governors to take steps for the election of his successor early in July.

After some discussion about the propriety of acceding to the request of Mr. ELRIDGE, the Governors resolved to accept his resignation, while they, at the same time, regretted the loss which the Institution would sustain in being deprived of his services.

The Board unanimously agreed that because the Workhouse did not bring money into the City Treasury, that was no reason why the experiment should be set down as a failure. It had already effected much good, and vagrants were taught that they had to work for the good treatment they received, and that they were not wholly irresponsible to society for their support. The Governors did not think that the habeas corpus should be suspended for the sole benefit of the Workhouse on Blackwell's Island, and that the evils complained of by Mr. ELRIDGE could not be remedied by them, but by the Legislature.

It was resolved that $150 should be appropriated for the usual celebration of the 4th of July on Randall's Island.

Previous to the adjournment of the Board, it was agreed that an appropriate address be prepared and presented to Mr. ELRIDGE, for the valuable services rendered in his capacity of Superintendent of the Workhouse.

Interesting to all about the Park Meeting.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

An enterprising cotemporary, in a series of highly eulogistic comments on the proceedings at the Pro-Slavery mass meeting in the Park on Monday evening last, begins the closing paragraph of the article by the assertion that "The Express had six of its best reporters to write down all that was said."

As I have some ambition to become a reporter myself one of these days, I would respectfully ask to be informed:

1. Whether the Express has six reporters altogether, good, bad and indifferent?

2. How whether the united salaries of its six reporters would pay two good reporters at the ordinary rates of remuneration on the two leading dailies?

3. Whether one of its best reporters has not been recently created one of the Mayor's aides—for value received?

4. Whether it did not cost half its report of the mass meeting and the manuscript received from the speakers? And

5. Whether it is willing that the assertion about its six best reporters should be taken as a sample of the credit to which its editorials generally are entitled? PITMAN, JR.

In reply to "PITMAN, JR.," we would say that we never meddle with other people's business. If he is anxious to learn whether he has a genius for reporting, we would advise him to try the Express by all means.

We had two reporters at the meeting in the Park, rather respectable in their way, to be sure, but under instructions not to tire themselves. We believe that our two reporters, however, contributed as much matter as the Express' six, and made a report considerably better. We thought they did pretty well in counting 20,000 people present. The six reporters of the Express only got it 5,000 ahead of us.

The Hudson River Association (South.)

The fifth annual meeting of the Hudson River Association was held Tuesday morning, in the Stanton-street Baptist Church. Rev. J. BANVARD preached the annual sermon. The Society then elected the following gentlemen officers:

Moderator, Rev. Dr. MASON; Clerk, Mr. GEO. W. BLEECKER; Treasurer, Mr. SOUTHWORTH.

The following Committees were then announced:

Committee on Religious Service—Rev. Messrs. Higgins, S. Lathrop, E. Phelps and W. Phelps.

Committee on Circular Letter—Messrs. Baker, of Williamsburg; Remington, of Brooklyn, and Morton, of New-York.

On Overtures—Messrs. Parmly and Sage.

On Important Subjects—Messrs. Taylor, of Brooklyn; Arnold, of Rochester, and Parmly, of Harlem.

On Admissions—Messrs. Barland, of Brooklyn; Bevy, of Bushwick, and Tapp, of this City.

In the evening they met again, when the time was devoted to the discussion of the question of Sunday Schools.

Knock before Entering.

The Ten Governors adopted a resolution to make two days of the month visiting days to Blackwell's Island and the Lunatic Asylum, except on which no visits may be made but by special permission. This, if observed, will greatly facilitate the important matter of keeping up appearances. It must be a great bore to the keepers of these institutions to have visitors popping in upon them unawares. Things don't look half as cleanly as when a little time is given to snug up.

Beggars in the Seventh Ward.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

I have noticed in your paper of to-day an article headed "A Beggarly Nuisance," relative to the Seventeenth Ward. The same I may say as to the doughty Seventh. Beggars—and beggars of the worst kind—infest every nook and corner. Your area gate is besieged, your front door is besieged, and, in short, the residents are annoyed exceedingly by the beggars. Can nothing be done towards establishing a new order of things? If so, I hope and pray that our Mayor will do something D. JR.

Meeting of Commissioners of Emigration.

MARINE HOSPITAL, Staten Island,
WEDNESDAY, June 20, 1855.

The Board met at the Hospital to-day. There were present, Commissioners VERPLANCK, (in the Chair,) KENNEDY, CARRIGAN, CUMMINGS and GARRIGUS.

A communication was noticed from E. B. Seaman, with recommendatory testimonials, applying for the situation of Clerk of the Marine Hospital. Laid on the table.

Another, from Dr. Harris, recommending Stephen Smith, M. D., as first assistant physician of the Hospital. The writer suggests, also, that the second physician be allowed to remain. Referred to the Staten Island Committee.

A resolution was passed as follows:

Resolved, That the Collector and Surveyor of the port of New-York be respectfully requested to extend their aid to this Board in its effort to protect emigrant passengers at the time of arrival, from imposition and fraud, by adopting such regulations as may be necessary for having the baggage of such passengers as are landed at Castle Garden examined at that place.

It was stated that the Mayor had expressed his willingness to extend all aid.

Mr. KENNEDY stated that the Custom-House Officers at Staten Island might as well be employed in taking care of emigrants,—that now their duties were exceedingly light.

A communication was read advising the appointment of an agent at Dunkirk. Mr. Commissioner CARRIGAN observed that the Castle Garden arrangement would stop the evil rendering such an agent necessary.

It was resolved that it be referred to a Committee to inquire and report to the Board, what saving can be made in the mode of carrying emigrants between the City, Quarantine and Ward's Island, and that if deemed necessary, they advertise for proposals from steamboat proprietors for the same.

Also, that the matron at Ward's Island be requested to report at the next meeting of the Board, the amount of money paid to her by parties taking wet nurses from the Island, by whom paid, when and how appropriated, and why such money has not been paid over to the Warden—to report to the Vice President.

Also, on motion of Mr. KELLY, that a flag and staff be obtained for Castle Garden. Messrs. Kennedy, Carrigan and Cummings, were appointed a Committee for Castle Garden.

Some other unimportant business being transacted, the Board adjourned

No Politics in the Police—Mr. Zilken's Case.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

Mr. JOHN N. ZILKEN is one of the officers that was lately discharged, by the Mayor and Recorder acting as Star Chamber Commissioners, in the sickness of Justice STUART. The charge was that he was guilty of intoxication, and of telling his Captain, that in charging him with intoxication, he (the Captain himself,) was guilty of a lie.

Now, such was the weight of the evidence as to the charge of intoxication, that the Commissioners have pronounced Mr. ZILKEN utterly guiltless; yet we find that this officer was subjected to entire dismissal from office for simply, promptly, and in good Saxon style, denying that he was intoxicated, when he was perfectly sober.

The Commissioners admitted to several of the citizens, that Mr. ZILKEN was, with the exception of the charging his superior officer with falsehood, one of the very best men we had in the service. His general character was supported by very ample testimonials from such men as AZEL W. DRAPER and EMMET BENSON. A large number of his fellow officers testified to his being remarkable for his sobriety and propriety of manner and language. Yet for the denial that he was drunk, coupled under strong temptations with the assertion that the man who charged him with so gross a falsehood, was himself a l—, he has been expelled—to the surprise and mortification of a large number of the citizens.

Mr. ZILKEN served long and with marked ability, in the Custom-House; has enjoyed high trusts, and carries an abundance of proofs from his superiors in office of honesty and honor.

The best of us are generally the most impulsive. Mr. ZILKEN is supposed to be a Whig; his successor is a Democrat. Mr. ZILKEN is an American; his superior officer was a foreigner, and we have learned to believe that there is such a thing possible now-a-days, as purposely drawing a man into a net—tempting him to give the lie, since it is sufficient to effect his deposition. But the decision of the Commissioners gives the lie, if not something worse, to the charge of the Captain. The Captain himself admitted on the trial that Mr. ZILKEN was generally so excellent as an officer, that he was just about to promote him to a sergeantcy.

Most men, in the case before us, would have deemed the non-proof of the charge of intoxication as the proof of incompetency of the Captain for his place, and a justification of Mr. ZILKEN for saying what he did. No consideration Captain could charge one of those under him with intoxication in the utter absence of proof, and a charge coming so suddenly upon a perfectly sober man of any manliness in his constitution could scarcely fail to secure the most abrupt and telling denial that could be given.

OFFICE OF THE COMMISSIONERS OF POLICE,
NEW-YORK, May 29, 1855.

In the matter of complaint against JOHN N. ZILKEN, Policeman, Twentieth Patrol District.—Charge, intoxication and unbecoming conduct.

Decision—Guilty of insubordination, not guilty of intoxication. Defendant be dismissed from the Department. IRA B. DAVIS, Deputy Clerk.

Decision in Admiralty on Appeal.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT—JUNE 20.

Before Judge Nelson.

SUPPLIES TO FOREIGN VESSELS.

James McMahon vs. The Brig Primero.—The libel was filed in this case to recover the amount of supplies, and work and labor furnished to the brig. The libelant alleged that the brig having put it here in distress, and in need of repairs, he was employed by her master to furnish the same. Judge Ingersoll, in the Court below, held that the vessel was a foreign vessel, and liable for the repairs, and gave a decree in favor of the libelant, from which the claimant appealed. The case coming up now for argument on appeal, Judge Nelson affirmed the decree of the Court below.

For libelant, Mr. Byrne. For appellant, Mr. Lapaugh.

Decision in Admiralty.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT—JUNE 20.

Before Judge Ingersoll.

COLLISION—LIABILITY OF TWO VESSELS JOINTLY AND OF THEIR OWNERS—PARTIES—PRACTICE.

Sylvanus G. Chase et al. vs. Humphrey H. Crary et al.—This libel was filed by the owners of the lake boat Frank Carver against the owner of the steamtug Catharine and the owners of the steamtug Geo. Birkbeck, Jr., to recover the damages occasioned to the Carver while in tow of the Catharine, by a collision with a lumber barge in tow of the Birkbeck, on the 8th of November, 1854, in the East River. The Carver was on the starboard side of the Catharine, and the barge was on the starboard side of the Birkbeck, her bow projecting beyond the steamboat's stem. The Catharine was coming from the Atlantic Docks, bound to Pier No. 17 East River, at the rate of about three miles an hour. The Birkbeck was bound to a Pier in Brooklyn, and when first seen appeared to be coming across the Catharine's bows. When about ten rods apart, the pilot of the Catharine gave orders to slow and back. The Birkbeck had slowed and stopped before, and about the time when the Catharine slowed, the Birkbeck backed her engine, but her forward progress was not stopped, nor was her course changed. The Catharine had been stopped in the water, but when about fifty feet apart, the pilot of the Birkbeck motioned her to go ahead, which was done—but notwithstanding, the barge struck the Carver head on a little aft amidships—and the libel is filed alleging joint negligence and fault on the part of the two steamboats.

The respondents took the exception that there can be no joint negligence on the part of two steamboats, and that they would not be jointly liable even in rem.

Held by the Court—That the case of the Samson in 2 Wallace, Jr., p. 465, is a case where a libel has been filed against two vessels in rem, without any such exception having been taken either by the counsel or the Court, which could hardly be, if there were any validity in the exception; and that the case of the Money, decided by Judge Betts in 1847, was different from this, in that the libel did not allege a joint negligence; that there can be many cases of collision imagined, in which it would appear clear to every one that two vessels could be chargeable with joint negligence; that it must therefore be held that a libel against two vessels for joint negligence can be sustained.

That where the collision is occasioned by the joint negligence of those who have charge of the vessels as the servants of the owners, then a libel may be sustained against the owners jointly as well as against the vessels.

That as in the case of the Samson, a charge of joint negligence may be made against two vessels, and the proof show negligence against only one; and in such a case the decree must be against that one and in favor of the others.

That on the evidence in this case there was negligence on the part of the Birkbeck in not changing her course, and if, as her pilot says, her engine was not strong enough to back against the wind, which was blowing, he was negligently expecting other vessels to be run down by having so weak an engine.

That there is no evidence of fault on the part of the Catharine. She slowed and stopped in time to enable the Birkbeck to avoid the collision, and had good reason to believe that the engine of the Birkbeck was strong enough to give her sterneway against the wind, and that she would change her course if necessary; that her going ahead was not the cause of the collision, which would have equally happened if she had not done so.

That there was no fault on the part of the Carver either in not having a man at her helm or in not properly using fenders. The pilot of the Catharine told the man at the helm that he was not wanted there, and the fenders was done with the fenders that could be done under the circumstances.

Libel dismissed as against Crary, the owner of the Catharine; and as against the owners of the Birkbeck, decree for libelants with a referee.

For libelants, Mr. Van Santvoord. For respondents, Mr. McMahon.

SUPREME COURT—IN CHAMBERS.

A DARK LADYE SHANGHAIED.

Queer Practice at the Tombs—Justice, but not law.—This morning, Sarah Stewart, a dark ladye, was brought up on a writ of habeas corpus, which had been procured by her legal advisor, Edmund Blossom, in consequence of a complaint made some days since by Mr. Bankman, that his client was arrested and taken before his Honor Michael Connolly, at the Tombs, and was by him convicted as a disorderly character, and adjudged to enjoy the rural delights of that marine villa known to fame as the Penitentiary on Blackwell's Island, for the term of sixty days. Now it so happens that his Honor the Justice at the Tombs, without trial, without jury, without—in fact—anything which could be called a trial, sentenced the prisoner to the Penitentiary, and she was forthwith conveyed there. The writ was served on the Keeper of the Penitentiary, who, however, refused to let the prisoner go, on the ground

The European News.

A disinterested spectator, watching the pending struggle before Sebastopol between the Russian and Allied armies, would scarcely know which to admire most—the besiegers, for their persevering and impetuous valor, or the besieged, for their stubborn and heroic resistance to one of the most potent combinations that the world has ever seen arrayed against a single nation. Again the news from the theatre of war is of an exciting character; more especially when it is contrasted with the wearying sameness of the dispatches we were wont to receive during the Winter months. It seems that the Allies have at length found the right man to fill the right place; for though PELISSIER may be accused to the eyelids in moral turpitude, he has nevertheless, within a few weeks, proved himself, to be an energetic soldier and an able commander.

The mails brought by the St. Louis informed us that, through the active operations of the Kertch expedition, no less than four war steamers and two hundred and forty vessels, employed in conveying supplies to the Russian army in the Crimea, have been destroyed. By the Asia, we learn further that the bombardment of Sebastopol was recommenced on the 6th of June, and that after a fierce cannonade of three days' duration, the French attacked and carried by assault the "Mamelon" and the "White Tower." Though the allied forces—now undoubtedly in splendid fighting condition—have given proof that they will not leave the Crimea, but will prosecute the war with determined vigor, yet their recent achievements will not bring the campaign to such a speedy issue as the London and Parisian press would have us believe.

The Russians have lost one valuable source for victualing their army; but there are others that must necessarily be cut off before they can be starved into submission. It must not be forgotten that several rivers are navigable from the very centre of the Russian Empire, and that among them is the Dnieper, which empties itself at Ocsakow, within forty miles of the town on the Isthmus of Perekop. These large rivers are all open to the carriage of every description of materiel to the Crimea, and from their banks there are well constructed roads to Perekop. The entrance of the French and English squadrons to the Sea of Azoff is but the opening of a new and more desperate campaign—the first step towards cutting off the hitherto inexhaustible supplies of Prince GORTSCHAKOFF. We know not yet by what means the Russian General can counteract the advantages his enemy has acquired; but from past experience it is fair to infer that he is not wholly destitute of resources. Sebastopol itself is composed of a series of defences, each of which, it appears, must be separately taken. Several have already fallen; and, though the siege will, in all probability, be greatly protracted, the recent successes of the Allies seem to indicate that the fortress, which has so long and so gaudily withstood their attack, must eventually be captured.

The general news from Europe by this arrival is not of any special importance. A full summary, received by telegraph from Halifax, will be found on another page of this morning's paper.

It Won't be Let Alone.

"Some weeks since," says the Buffalo Commercial Advertiser, "we took occasion to make a pretty emphatic expression of our opinion that it would be good policy for the Know-Nothings to let the Slavery question alone." But the Slavery question won't be let alone; like the ghost of Banquo, it will intrude itself into company which would rather be rid of its presence; it is a black cloud without any silver lining, that will rise in the political horizon and cast its dark shadow over the pleasantest prospects; it is a spirit that cannot be exorcised, and the only way it can be dealt with safely is to grapple it boldly, as you would a nettle to avoid its stings. We do not believe it is half so formidable in reality, when it is fearlessly approached, as when it is viewed at a distance. The Commercial sees in the treatment of the Slavery question by the Know-Nothing Convention in Philadelphia a destruction, or a "split" of a "party which might have been national." To ignore the Slavery question, then, according to the Buffalo organ of the Silver Grays, is to be national; and, if this be the case, we fear there will be no National party organized very soon. The speakers at the Park meeting on Monday entertained a very different opinion from that of the Commercial. To them it was eminently national to settle the Slavery question by giving everything to the South and yielding nothing to the North. In truth the Southern members of the Know-Nothing party, as well as their friends in New-York, differ from the Northern members only in the orthography of their political designation;—at the North they are Know-Nothings, but, at the South, they spell the name No-Nothings. The difference is not great, but it appears to be sufficient to cause a split. It is not, as Mercutio says, as wide as a church door, nor as deep as a well, but it is enough. The party has split upon the question of Slavery, and, like the late WILLIAM FOOLE, the Commercial Advertiser of Buffalo confesses it is a goner.

Better than Fireworks.

There are sensible people in Boston. They have on hand a Fourth of July to celebrate. They might roast their Slave-catching soldiery on the Common, and about the streets; and as the aimless, but not wholly inappropriate winding up of a day's Maine law dissipation, they might send rocket and blue-light and candle bursting through the twilight air. They might have procession and speech, ovation and oration, song, supper, and glorification generally. But nothing of this land-lubberly sort will serve. Bostonians have found out with the old poet, that water—Cochituate excepted, which is greasy—is the best of all things. Their Yankee cunning has therefore served them a happy turn, in recalling that, some little, to say no more, of the glory of revolutionary times was won on the waters; and in suggesting that for once precedent be set aside in favor of the flood, in place of the field. A boat-race is the device—a boat-race, implying among the competitors nerve, muscle and wind—not the wind supplied by Boreas or Auster, but such as is furnished by the stalwart lungs and broad chests of sturdy oarsmen. Thus the Venetians managed their Fourths of July—with thronging galleys and gondolas, gay streamers, bright eyes, noisy cannon, applauding thousands. And so, we venture to think, in deference to all the BRIGGERS, and all the HOWARDS of the Board of Aldermen, that every maritime city should do, especially one whose well-being, and being of any kind, are so directly dependent upon the great deep, as are those of our good town of New-York. Why not, then, a boat-race in New-York, as well as in Boston Bay?

So we may economize the thousands annually sacrificed to Vulcan in the infernal shapes devised by the pyrotechnist. So we may preserve our military cool and comfortable, instead of fricasseeing them, between sweat and sunshine, about the streets. So we may attain the chief end of all popular amusement, novelty; which cannot surely be predicated of martial displays, wherewith, on the slightest provocation, the ways of the City are harassed from one year's end to the other; or of fireworks, of which we shall haply hear, see and smell quite as much as is consistent with personal safety and comfort, whether the City treasury deal in them or not. We crave a change; a change from exhausting and perilous pageants, to sports athletic and invigorating.

Whether it is the memorably unhappy fate of the three wise men of Gotham, who put to sea in a bowl, that has rendered our people so little partial to aquatic amusements, is a point deserving the attention of antiquaries. Our festivals and games, it is quite certain, are as thoroughly inland, as if New-York were Baalbec or Moscow. There is, to be sure, the annual regatta of the Yacht Club; but that has nothing of the athletic about it. Its heroes go forth in kid gloves. Men may for years navigate the most consummate results of yacht-building ingenuity, without expanding a single flexor or extensor of the arm, or widening the shoulders by a half-cubit. Our need is different. We want a substitute, or at least a parallel, for target-shooting, ball-playing, fist-fighting, foot-racing. We want something to beguile young men from the sedentary relaxation of the gaming, or the semi-effeminate skill of the billiard table, and lead them out into God's open air, where health, strength, manhood may be earned—where jolly young watermen may, to the eternal benefit of the national marine, come in time to be bold and skillful mariners. As islanders, we live too exclusively on dry land—are too little intimate with our next-door neighbors on all sides, the waves. As men—so the knowing in such matters assure us—we are feeble and undeveloped, lacking the fire and vigor of our grandsires. The people grows always: the individual decays. We require a preventive to further decline, and will find it in the encouragement of all manly games and amusements, not inconsistent with public order and decency. There would be less rowdyism and pugilism, our word for it, if some more meritorious way of ventilating the spirits of young Bowery were furnished. For the present year we are no doubt too late, as the most of what boat-clubs we have are entered for the Boston plate. We may bear it in mind for the future, and keep the subject fresh by imagining what a glorious spectacle our broad Bay will present when its waters shall be thick besprent with gallantly-decorated steamers, sail-boats and row-boats; and the shores, and shipping, and house-tops in every direction alive with masses, enthusiastically alert to witness the stirring novelty of a boat-race. Let us by all means have the entertainment underlined for next year, and let competitors put themselves forthwith in training.

The Cold Weather.

Winter and Spring are gone, but instead of the heaven of Summer which we should have entered into, we are still lingering in a purgatorial state of weather which disarranges all our domestic calculations. The Winter of our discontent is buried, but glorious Summer has not yet dawned upon us in New-York. The state of the thermometer is but of little moment in the City where we can walk under awnings when it is too hot, and close our windows when it is too wet or too cold, but out in the fields the case is very different, and we are beginning to receive intimations from the Central and Northern sections of the State touching the growing corn, or rather the corn that has stopped growing, which have a tendency to dash the exuberant feelings caused by the auspicious reports from the great wheat growing districts. Yesterday was more like a June day than any that we have yet had since the "leafy month" came in, but it was far from being hot.

We imagine, however, that it was what the farmers call growing weather in the country, and that the strawberries and cherries will be sweeter and cheaper on account of it. The clothing stores, Summer hotels, steamboats and railroads have felt the immediate effects of the cold weather in their diminished receipts. The costumes of the streets have still a Wintry aspect, and thin coats and straw hats are but rarely seen. Yesterday morning the weather was cold and wet, but at the close of the afternoon there was a very sensible change in the atmosphere, and we may now look upon the Summer as fairly inaugurated. The roses have got tired of waiting for the warm days of June, and have come out with great magnificence and beauty. It will be warm enough in July, and even though there are to be no more cakes and ale, the sun will be hot in the streets, and there are "pippins to come" in the Autumn.

"—— Destroyed all the depôts and vessels laden with corn and supplies for the Russian army; one man only was wounded."

Here is a most pestilent fallacy. As if ship loads and ware-houses stored with the means of life could be destroyed and one man only be wounded. There were, in fact, thousands thereby deeply wounded in the most sensitive of their organs, the stomach. There will be suffering in the Crimea, as well among the Allies as the Russians, because of that scattered corn. Even our loaves of bread from the baker's round the corner, will be seen to shrink at this news. At Kertch a hundred or two cargoes went to the bottom; six millions of rations at least have been most irrationally sent to augment the rottenness of the Putrid Sea. Were these rations of tallow, or raw pork, or fish oil, we might understand the rationale of such prodigal waste; they would have been suited only to the digestive standard of Muscovite and Cossack; and quite below the regimen of civilized man-eaters. Were the sea populous with Russian men-of-war, we might appreciate the difficulty of bearing the plunder safely to the Crimea or to Constantinople, and the necessity of destroying it. But they were of that same cereal grain upon which one-half of France and England subsist; it was neither sour, as far as we learn, nor poisoned, and Britain ruled the wave without a rival. A million of bushels at one moment is in the hands of Russians, and invaluable to feed Russians; at the next moment it is in the hands of Englishmen, and valueless to feed them or their friends: superfluous and inedible, it is thrown away. On what principle does food obtained from the enemy serve a less wholesome purpose than that brought thousands of miles? Is it more easy for the Allies to replace such a loss than for the Russians on their own soil to do so? Is the wanton destruction of the bread upon which the existence of nations depends, less culpable than the wanton demolition of houses and waste of lives, against which civilization always protests indignantly? It is all a muddle, we do not pretend to fathom it—we only know it is a subject in which the market for breadstuffs the world over has a profoundly sympathetic interest. The issue is between mankind in general and the fish of the Azoff.

Musical.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.—The La Grange Troupe make their reappearance to-night in "Norma." As the opportunities for hearing Mme. LA GRANGE and the other artistes of her Troupe are limited to five performances, there will we hope be a good attendance.

BROADWAY THEATRE.—Signora VIRTTI VERTIPRACH, the prima donna contralto, takes a benefit here to-morrow night. Two acts of "Romeo e Giulietta," and the second act of "Lucrezia Borgia," will be performed. Signora VIRTTI will be assisted by Mme. BERTUCCA MARETZEK, Signora FERRARI, (her first appearance in opera,) ADELINE PATTI, Signori BOLOGNI, BADIALI, CUTURI, COLETTI, ROCCO, &c. The orchestra under the direction of Signor LA MANNA. Prices of admission as usual. Decidedly a cheap evening's entertainment.

ANOTHER "TESTIMONIAL" BENEFIT.—On the heels of the WALLACK absurdity comes another Testimonial. This time it is to Mr. T. B. JOHNSTON, a third or fourth rate comedian, recently attached to Mr. BURTON's Theatre. We do not wish to underrate the talents of Mr. JOHNSTON. On the contrary, we believe him to be a valuable member of a stock company. Mr. BURTON thought so or he would not have retained him so long. But there are at least a hundred men of equal merit in New-York, and why Mr. JOHNSTON should be singled out for Testimonializing, we are at a loss to imagine. Perhaps, however, the other ninety-nine mean to try their luck.

To add dignity to the occasion, it is said to be Mr. JOHNSTON's "farewell" benefit. A good bill has been provided,—so we are informed,—and as in the case of Madame VIRTTI's benefit, there is enough given for the money. As a theatrical speculation the bill is good; as a theatrical testimonial, it is fudge.

Visit of the Common Council to our City Institutions.

The first visit this season of the Committee deputed by the Common Council to inspect the Institutions under the management of the Board of Governors, took place yesterday. At 12 o'clock, the Almshouse Committee, consisting of Councilmen Scott, Hart, Holder and Mason, accompanied by Councilman WAINWRIGHT and some ladies, met a deputation of the Governors at Bellevue Hospital and proceeded to Randall's Island and inspected the Institutions there. They expressed themselves in high terms of the order, regularity and admirable arrangements which pervaded the whole management of those Institutions, which not only reflect credit upon the City of New-York, but upon the United States. The children in the House of Refuge were neatly dressed, seemed vigorous and healthy. The Committee next visited the Lunatic Asylum on Blackwell's Island, and were greatly pleased with the care and attention bestowed by the officers of that Institution on all matters committed to their charge.

They then visited the Workhouse, and inspected the industrial wards, where various articles were manufactured by the girls confined therein. They afterwards proceeded to the Penitentiary, where they were sumptuously entertained by the Governors. They subsequently visited Bellevue Hospital, and went through several of the wards. The trip was most agreeable to the City Fathers, as the day was fine, the scenery splendid, and the reception polite and hospitable. We understand that the elder branch of the Patres purpose, on next Wednesday, enjoying themselves in a similar manner.

LUNATIC ASYLUM.

The Lunatic Asylum on Blackwell's Island is one of our noblest Institutions. Any person who takes the trouble of visiting there and sees poor human nature in its extremest deprivation—"the dome of thought, the palace of the soul," shattered and in ruins—some in utter hopelessness, with drooped head and closed eyes, seeming only to enjoy a kind of mere vegetable existence—others reveling in a sort of unnatural hilarity—persons, we repeat, who have witnessed those humiliating scenes, must commend the philanthropy which has provided, not only a place of refuge for those creatures, but a place where they may by skillful treatment be eventually cured of the terrible malady under which they labor.

Doctor RENNET finds that many of the patients are peculiarly fond of engravings, and that when placed in the hall they have a beneficial influence upon their minds, and tend to divert them from fits of melancholy. Several gentlemen of New-York have contributed engravings for the use of the Asylum, and we are sure that once the fact of their utility is made known, there will be many contributors in our City and its vicinity.

Know-Nothing Mass Meeting in Baltimore.

BALTIMORE, Wednesday, June 20.

The mass meeting to ratify the doings of the National Convention of Know-Nothings, at Philadelphia, came off this evening. The meeting was called to order by JOHN DUKEHART, Chairman of the Committee of Arrangements, who made a brief address—speaking of the first appearance of the great party in public to openly ratify and confirm the great republican principle, that Americans shall rule America. The following officers were then elected:

President—ANTHONY KENNEDY, Esq.

Vice Presidents.

D. K. YOUNGER, Esq.,	Col. R. FRENCH,
THOS. CREAMER, Esq.,	WM. O. WELSH, Esq.,
THOS. TROTTON, Esq.,	WM. T. VALIANT, Esq.,
GEO. W. HERRING, Esq.,	OTIS SPEAR, Esq.,
JAMES MUSGRAVE, Esq.,	WM. ADRSON, Esq.,
L. D. TAYLOR, Esq.,	W. E. BARTLETT, Jun., Esq.,
S. G. SEGSBY, Esq.,	WM. FYES, Esq.,
H. J. C. TARR, Esq.,	CHAS. G. GRIFFITH, Esq.,
Col. THOS. PIERPOINT,	J. T. MITCHELL, Esq.,
Thos. W. BALL, Esq.,	J. H. BARNES, Esq.

Secretaries.

ABRAM REQUA, Esq.,	W. D. RHODES, Esq.,
W. J. HAMILL, Esq.,	Dr. J. E. BOULDEN,
C. DOUT, Esq.,	R. M. J. HARRIS, Esq.

The following resolutions were then read and adopted by acclamation:

Whereas, The American Convention assembled in Philadelphia having laid down principles for the guidance of the American Party, so purely National, American and patriotic in tone; so congenial with the spirit of those Republican institutions under which we have been nurtured, and the perpetuity of which we believe to be essential to the preservation of those abolished blessings and liberties for which our forefathers battled and bled; so peculiarly adapted to the exigencies of the times, designed as they are to thwart the intrigues and machinations of foreigners, and exercise that demon of sectionalism which has threatened the very integrity of our hallowed Union; Therefore, be it

Resolved, That the principles and sentiments enunciated by the American Convention be, and they are hereby cordially approved of by the Americans of Baltimore, and that we will ever endeavor to maintain them in all their purity and strength.

Resolved, That the American party fully recognizes the rights of the several States as expressed and reserved in the Constitution of the United States; that Congress, under that Constitution, possesses no power to legislate upon the subject of Slavery; and that any agitation of that question, whether within or without Congress, is violative of that spirit of compromise in which the foundation of our Government was laid, and should be condemned by every true lover of his country.

Resolved, That the American party unqualifiedly condemns, and will ever endeavor to counteract all efforts, by any sect or party, to bring about a union of Church and State; that it pledges itself to protect every man in the full and fair enjoyment of his religious rights; and that, regarding, as we do, the Bible as the basis of all truth and good government, we esteem it as our highest duty as patriots and good citizens, to oppose its exclusion from our public schools.

Resolved, That as the Naturalization Laws have been so long perverted to the basest purposes, by corrupt political demagogues, as to cause the foreign elements to grow up to be a dangerous power in our midst, deciding our political contests as it pleases, that there exists an imperative necessity for their radical modification and stricter enforcement.

Resolved, That "none but Americans shall rule America."

Resolved, That it is the sense of this meeting that the honest and industrious immigrant who seeks an asylum in our land from the tyranny of the Old World, should be welcomed to our shores; but that such restriction should be placed upon immigration as will exclude the foreign paupers and felons whom the lazar houses and penitentiaries of Europe are daily emptying into our midst.

Resolved, That our warmest thanks be accorded those distinguished members of the Convention to whose talents, patriotism and indefatigable labors we are indebted for the glorious and brilliant results we this night celebrate.

The meeting is doubtless the largest political gathering ever held in this quarter. There cannot be less than 20,000 people in the Square, all wild with enthusiasm. The ground presents a most animated spectacle, with its gay banners, transparencies, and brilliant fireworks. Some of the bands were preceded by a cannon, and a salute was fired as they entered the Square. Among the mottoes on the banners we notice the following: "Union and nothing but the Union." "Sam is in town and will defend the firesides of the Sires of '76." "No foreign dictation." "Charity begins at home." "Sam is coming," &c.

Speeches were made by RAYNOR, of North Carolina, BROWN, of Philadelphia, BOTELER, ALBERT PIKE, and others, from the various stands. Mr. PIKE made a telling and popular speech. He advocated the great duty of cultivating a hearty national spirit. He believed, and so did the great body of the American people, that those who were citizens were better republicans and better qualified to administer the affairs of Government than those born in other lands. This might be called prejudice, but if so, it was the palladium of our liberty. The vital essence of the American sentiment was found upon the monuments of the Revolution, and was nurtured by the wise precepts and admonitions of the fathers of the Republic. It was one of those instincts of nationality which God had implanted in the human heart, in the mysteries of which the masses needed no instruction. Mr. PIKE next spoke of the rise of the party in Arkansas, which was first heard of there in November last, and now had a majority of 10,000. As it was in Arkansas, so it was everywhere in the West.

The meeting adjourned at a late hour and dispersed in good order, every one apparently well pleased with the demonstration.

From Washington.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, June 20.

The Navy Retiring Board assembled to-day, Commodore SHUBRICK, President. Instructions from the Secretary of the Navy, presenting the mode of examination, were received and read. The proceedings were conducted with closed doors. The Board will be in session six weeks by limitation.

Consul FARRAN is here, at Willard's Hotel.

By a recent arrangement of the Post-Office Department, the transportation of the Southern mail old Potomac River to Aquia Creek, will be abandoned after the 1st July. On the 1st September, the Washington and Alexandria Railroad will be completed, when the mails will be conveyed from this city by that route, thus guarding against the interruptions by ice in the Winter.

The Navy Department received this morning a box of piratical flags, captured by Lieut. PERSLE from pirate-junks sunk by him at the East Indies.

SIDNEY WEBSTER, the President's Private Secretary, has returned, after a long absence.

From Cincinnati.

CINCINNATI, Wednesday, June 20.

Judge STORER, of the Superior Court, issued an attachment to-day against County Commissioners Messrs. FALLON and MULLER, for proceeding with the work on the Lunatic Asylum after the Court had allowed an injunction.

Extensive arrangements have been made for the celebration of the Fourth of July. Notice has been given that no Catholic or foreign military companies will be allowed to join in the procession. All the foreign Protestant Associations will unite in the proceedings.

The steam fire engine built for the city of New-Orleans was tried this afternoon. It threw a stream of water 263 feet through an inch-and-a-half nozzle, when the hose burst, and the force of water escaping broke a boy's leg.

The river is falling, but there still continues good stage water. The weather is warm and showery.

TO AGUE SUFFERERS.—TAKE NO MORE ARSENIC, Tonics, Mercury, Quinine, Fever-drinks, or Anti-Periodics of any kind. The well known physician of these western prairies, proves them to be worse than useless, either of false medical principles or of misapplied diagnosis. The accompanying remarkable patient, Mr. Hickman, was the case for which the one remedy in the world was discovered called "RHODES' FEVER AND AGUE CURE." Take this and health is secured. The certificate of the celebrated chemist, Dr. Chilson, accompanies each bottle. For sale by C. H. RING, C. V. CLICKENER & CO., and druggists generally. J. A. RHODES, Providence, R. I.

THERE IS AN UNUSUAL TENDENCY TO FEVER and Ague this year. Indeed, almost every disease seems to assume an intermittent form. Persons feeling premonitory symptoms may avert this exhausting malady by a timely use of DESHLER'S ANTI-PERIODIC PILLS. These are tasteless, and may be taken by all ages. Sold by all dealers, and by C. D. DESHLER, Agent, at the wholesale depôt, No. 261 Broadway, New-York.

"A RAT! A RAT! DEAD FOR A QUARTER!" Mr. CHARLES FARRAR—Dear Sir: It gives me great pleasure to testify to the great merits of your "Rat and Roach Exterminator." For years had we battled with these filthy pests, and it appeared as if they were every year within our power or knowledge, and kept increasing in spite of us and against them, and although we had at one time made of the enemy, their renewed legions were soon as rife as ever in all the best haunts and places. You by the use of your valuable, EXTERMINATING WAR, have routed the enemy—horse, foot and dragoons. We dare not venture even our guard, as there are not enough of the enemy left to try experiments upon. MERRITT & LANGLEY, Proprietors of the Bowery Theatre.

GURAUD'S LIBRARY OF ROMANCE.
JULIA WRIGHT—CANTO XXV.

Day here reared a very restless night,
Waiting and wearying for the morrow's dawn,
And when the first faint streak of crimson light
Has gone the eastern sky proclaimed the dawn,
Up rose the lady pale as marble, dressed, and as the light
Rays of the sun filled the college lawn
Her eyes the full pull of Miss Julia's mortal—
A hollow-eyed, delicate, love-sick maiden.
The power of many a lady's delusion may be traced in a tinted, fleshly, sallow, yellow, rough or wrinkled face; the certain remedy for which is unquestionably GOURAUD'S Celebrated Arabian Medicated Cosmetic, introduced by an amazing number of years upon her upper lip or forehead. GOURAUD'S Cosmetic is designed exclusively to correct such appearances. It may be, too, that she tosses restless by the side of some fair lady, and knowing that GOURAUD'S Dye instantly and with no danger, her dry locks to a rich jet black, or dark brown, it is surprising how little may have become gray, or how little of the bloom on her cheeks. GOURAUD'S Rouge, or Vegetable Cosmetic, is a delicate rose tint, so like nature, it defies the eye. GOURAUD'S Pearl White is the best article in the world for the neck, bust and arms.

ON WEDNESDAY,
HILLIARD'S SPEECHES.

SPEECHES AND ADDRESSES. By HENRY W. HILLIARD. 8vo., muslin, $1 25.

The greater portion of this volume consists of speeches delivered in the United States House of Representatives, of which the author was a member during a most critical and eventful period. They are devoted to the discussion of the most important questions which have ever agitated the country; prominent among which are the Sub Treasury scheme, the Mexican War, the peace which concluded this war, the form of Government to be adopted for the newly-acquired Territory, and the political aspects of the question of Slavery. These are discussed in the light of principles of universal application rather than on mere temporary and party grounds. Mr. HILLIARD takes throughout high Southern views; but however widely many readers may differ from him in sentiment and principle, no one can fail to recognize the dignified and courteous manner in which the discussion is conducted; and the profuseness and opinions of the historical allusions with which the author's views is elucidated and enforced. The addresses of a literary character which are appended show that, in entering the stormy arena of political life, Mr. HILLIARD has not neglected the pursuits of the accomplished scholar and thoughtful philosopher.

ON THURSDAY,
CONSTANCE HERBERT.

A Novel. By GERALDINE E. JEWSBURY, author of "Marian Withers," "Zoe," "The Adopted Child," &c. 8vo., paper, 50c.

From the Examiner.

"Constance Herbert" is deeply interesting—full of power and earnestness.

From the Morning Post.

"Constance Herbert" is, in our judgment, the most successful of Miss Jewsbury's performances.

From the Athenæum.

"Constance Herbert" is a poem in its beauty and its lofty purpose—a romance in its variety and fascination. The tale, as a tale, is deeply interesting; full of quiet pathos, and a calm and beautiful morality. It will be read with rare pleasure, and remembered with healthful interest.

III.
ON FRIDAY,
MOUNTAINS AND MOLEHILLS;
OR, RECOLLECTIONS OF A BURNT JOURNAL.

By FRANK MARRYATT. With numerous illustrations by the Author. 18mo., muslin, $1 25.

From the John Bull.

Life as it is in California, with all its difficulties and dangers, as well as its advantages and its attractions, and with all the varieties of the human character which it has developed, is described in these pages in a lively and graphic narrative.

From the London Athenæum.

What is very refreshing in Mr. Marryatt is, that he does not prefer himself to the places that he visits. He does not appear to have succeeded in his main Californian projects, but no trace of that fact is to be found in his Californian descriptions. He moves along light of heart and light of hand, sketching what he sees and feels with shrewdness and good humor. Like his father's "Jacob Faithful," he takes it easy. Hence, an honest, healthy glow of good-nature breathes from his pages; and of this quality the natural expression is a kindred style, sagacious and genial. A pleasant book is the result; and though Mr. Marryatt appears to lose advantage than he possibly would had the devouring element spared his journal, yet even in its ashes lives more fire than belongs to many a publication making much more pretension.

From the London Morning Chronicle.

It is a most fascinating book, and, once taken up, will not lightly be laid down again. One feels, on turning its pages, as if he had started for a journey through a pleasant country on a light breezy day, with an agreeable companion, whose lively rattle and unceasing flow of spirits prevents even a momentary sensation of weariness. We know not where an equally good account of California is to be obtained, or where more information respecting the resources and capabilities of the country, the aspect of the gold-fields, the yield of the mines, and the character of the miners, is to be obtained within an equally narrow compass. Mr. Marryatt's descriptions have the advantage of being drawn from the life, and they are described to the life.

THE GREAT BOOK OF THE DAY.
THE WATCHMAN,
AN INTERESTING AND MORAL TALE OF DOMESTIC LIFE.

"A COMPANION TO "THE LAMPLIGHTER."

Published in 1 vol., cloth, 400 pages.

This work has been long and anxiously looked for, and its publication is hailed with satisfaction by all readers of pure and classic fiction. The characters are graphically portrayed and vividly impressed upon the imagination of the reader.

"The Watchman" bids fair to become the most popular book of the season.

Although it has been out but few weeks, the fifteenth thousand has gone to press. Everybody reads it. In some respects it is far superior to the "Lamplighter."

When the "Lamplighter" appeared, the reading public was taken by surprise. It was an original creation in literature, and was eagerly purchased and perused with an avidity that proved the author's power to touch the springs of the heart. Since that period, although many attempts have been made, no work has been written which, in the opinion of the best judges of literary merit, is calculated to achieve such success as the "Lamplighter." Its pictures of real life and living characters—moral and chaste in its tone, and lofty in its aspirations. The title of the book speaks for itself. It is a story of humble life—a plain, unvarnished narrative of the distress and struggles of the poor and lowly in their battles with life. It is essentially an American novel, for it proves that in this country, to the possessor of talent, industry and integrity, poverty and lowly birth are no bars to advancement.

Price for the complete work, handsomely bound in one volume, cloth, is ONE DOLLAR.

Copies of the above work will be sent to any person, to any part of the United States, per first mail, free of postage, on their remitting $1 to the publishers, in a letter, post-paid.

MINISTERING CHILDREN.
A TALE DEDICATED TO CHILDHOOD.

By the author of "Sunday Afternoons in the Nursery," &c.
12mo., Cloth, $1.
Published by J. C. RIKER, No. 129 Fulton-st., New-York.

From the Boston Atlas.

It is an excellent tale, intended and well suited to awaken in children kindly feelings for the poor.

From the New-York Herald.

The tale possesses an interest and a moral, which will render it instructive and beneficial to older readers.

From the Boston Post.

This production is intended to aid parents in training their children to the exercise of kindly feelings and true charity toward the poor.

From the Boston Transcript.

It is an elaborate and well-constructed story, illustrative of the great moral efficiency and religious principles of which the period of childhood is naturally capable.

From the Boston Daily Bee.

The aim of this book is a noble one, viz.: to inspire children with high thoughts; to urge them on in the path of virtue, peace kindness, humanity, religion. * * * It is such a book as children can understand. Read in every family circle, it must do good. We advise its use in this manner. Let children learn how much better and happier they will be, if good. Let it find its way to every fireside.

LONDON:
ITS LITERARY AND HISTORICAL CURIOSITIES.
With numerous engravings. 12mo. Cloth.

From the New-York Tribune.

There is no work written, to our knowledge, which furnishes a more authentic introduction to the heart of the English capital, than this attractive volume.

It is an excellent book, just such a book as every American who goes to London should take with him, and which any one can read with profit even if he has no intention to visit London.—Dr. Baird.

A CARD.—The attention of the undersigned having been called to a work, just published, entitled "CONNECTICUT CORNERS," which contains injurious statements concerning the late firm of BAGGLEHALL, FLORIC & CO., to the effect that they were in the habit of imposing upon their numerous customers by selling vile manufactured liquors for pure, genuine articles, I deem it but justice to myself, as well as the friends of the late firm, to deny these charges as the most emphatic manner. No article of liquor was ever sold by BAGGLEHALL, FLORIC & CO. which was not genuine and precious, as represented. I am aware that some calling themselves "respectable dealers" are in the habit of manufacturing spurious articles, but am proud to be able to declare that no firm of which I have ever been a member has been guilty of such practices. Whether I shall seek legal redress against the perpetrators of this outrage in the present unsettled state of the laws, must depend on circumstances. Meanwhile, I hasten to make this public denial of the charges.

NEW MUSIC.—"Our Good Old Friend," by ALICE HAWTHORNE, author of "What is Home without a Mother," &c., &c. This song is embellished with a beautiful lithographic portrait of the author. The ballads written by this lady have been more successful than those of any other American author. The beauty of the sentiment in the poetry and the simplicity of the music, combine to render them popular. Published by WM. HALL & SON, 158 Chatham-st., New-York.

MARKET REPORTS.

Weekly Review of New-York Dry Goods Trade.

NEW-YORK, WEDNESDAY, June 20, 1855—5 P. M.

The mild in most descriptions of domestic goods during this week, had been quite moderate; but the improvement and upward tendency in prices, we previously noticed, have still continued throughout. The stocks on hand are not unusually large, and, as the future prospects are more encouraging, holders do not show any disposition to realize, even at the enhanced rates now current. A much better demand, and a still higher range of prices ruled, at present, generally anticipated during the June trade sales and the entire Fall months; and with hopes of this nature widely entertained, no sacrifices are likely to happen at this stock, if this be the case, as now expected. Hence, though inquiry is not very brisk, prices are still, in the main, quite firm and tending up.

Brown Sheetings and Shirtings continue to be rather sparingly offered at the improved figures last mentioned, but the demand appears somewhat tame. Bleached Sheetings and Shirtings are in fair request, at steadily strengthening prices. We have nothing really new to notice in Cotton Flannels. Cotton Jeans are but lightly held in, and are unchanged in value. Denims rule steady and quiet, yet firm. A moderate inquiry exists for Drills at 7½c. for Brown, 7½c.@8c. for Bleached, and 9½c. for Blue, ⅞ yard. Duck is held 1c.@2c. ⅞ yard higher, but is not very active. Ginghams are pretty briskly sought after at rising rates. Lawns are rare and inquired after. Nankins have not varied. Osnaburgs are quoted by factors 1c.@1c. ⅞ yard dearer, yet they are very lightly bought, and the advance has not, so far, been generally conceded. Printing Cloths are rather quiet, but closely held with still greater firmness. Prints are essentially the same. Stripes and Ticks are also unaltered.

Woolens display no new feature of special importance. The current movements are not very extensive, and prices are, on the whole, unchanged. The course of the market, however, is, if anything, favorable to sellers. We notice an considerable degree of activity in Cloths, and in Cassimeres or Cloths. A little better inquiry exists for Doeskins and Plaids, which are nicely held. Jeans and Linseys are also held with much firmness, but they are inactive. Kentucky Jeans are quiet, yet steady. The supply has been greatly reduced. There is a moderate business being transacted in Satinets and Tweeds, which rule firm. The finer styles of these goods are not abundant; but there is a sufficiently ample stock of other makes on hand.

Foreign Fabrics are still unchanged in demand and value. The operations in all styles are extremely limited; but what is being done effects no remarkable variation in prices. The market is not heavily stocked,—while the current imports are of no great magnitude, and present prospects favor the belief that we are not yet to be over supplied for some months hence. These circumstances induce considerable confidence among operators, and tend to at least preserve the firmness and uniformity of prices.

Markets.—Carefully reported for the N. Y. Daily Times.

WEDNESDAY, June 20—5 P. M.

ASHES—Are in very moderate supply and firm; regent at $6 for Pearls, and $6 25 for Pots, ⅞ 100 lbs.

BOOTS AND SHOES—Nothing really new has occurred in this line, the past week.

COAL—Foreign is dull and heavy, without change in value. Anthracite is in ample stock and limited demand at $5 @ $5 50, ⅞ ton of 2,000 lbs., delivered.

COFFEE—Remains as last noticed, with sales for the day of 170 bags Java at 14c.@14½c.; 150 bags Maracaibo at 11½c.@11¾c.; 500 Laguayra at 12½c.@11c.; and 200 Rio at 10½c. ⅞ lb.

COTTON—Holds in stock request, but is unchanged in quotation.

COTTON—The market is somewhat unsettled. Holders are evidently anxious for firmness, but the inquiry is not urgent. The Asia's mails are needed to restore regularity and steadiness to the trade.

NEW-YORK CLASSIFICATION.

	Upland.	Florida.	Mobile.	N.O.&Texas.
Ordinary, ⅞ lb.	10½	10½	10½	10½
Middling	12	12	12½	12½
Middling Fair	12½	12½	12½	14
Fair	13½	13½	14	14

FREIGHTS—Rates have transpired of 4,000 lbs. Live Geese at, according to quality, from 50c.@90c. ⅞ h.

FISH—Dry Cod are still in light supply and much wanted, at $4@4 25 ⅞ cwt. Mackerel are, in general, more sought after, and now bring $19@$19 50 for large No. 1; $18 for No. 2, these being the least in request; and $15 for No. 3. Pickled Salmon are selling at $20 @ 50 ⅞ tierce, and $21 ⅞ bbl. Connecticut Shad are also selling slowly at $10 25 for No. 1, and $9 50 for No. 2, ⅞ half bbl. Smoked Herrings are plenty and heavy, at 3c.@37c. for Scaled, and 3c. for No. 1 ⅞ box.

FLOUR AND MEAL—State and Western brands are not so active. Lighter receipts and rather higher claims of sellers have interfered with the day's business. The Eastern and local trade are the principal buyers. No speculative inquiry is known to exist. The day's movements include 5,400 bbls. within our range:

Ordinary State	$6 75 [illegible]
Fancy State	6 81½ @ 6 93
Round Hoop Ohio	9 12½ @ 9 12½
Extra State	9 37½ @ 9 62½
Extra Western and Indiana and Michigan	9 62½ @ 9 87½
Fancy Michigan	9 87½ @ 10 12½
Extra Ohio	9 62½ @ 9 87½
Fancy Ohio	9 87½ @ 10 12½
Extra Indiana and Michigan	10 12½ @ 10 62½
Fancy Indiana and Michigan	9 62½ @ 10 62½
Extra Genesee	11 00 @ 12 75

Corn Meal is doing better; 1,100 bbls. common to extra sound brands at $1 50@$1 ⅞ bbl. Southern is very dull and heavy. There is not a large amount offering, but it is found is an extremely limited sale. The day's sales are computed at 1,000 bbls., at from $1 50@$1 75 for the whole range from unsound to extra, ⅞ bbl. Rye Flour is quiet, but firm at $7 50@$8, ⅞ bbl. Jersey Corn Meal is unchanged in the extreme of 140 bbls. at $3 50 @ $3, ⅞ bbl.

FRUIT—With diminished supplies and a moderate demand, prices are, in the main, well supported. The current transactions, however, are light.

GRAIN—Wheat is more inquired for and is a shade firmer. The day's sales amount to 500 bushels Canadian White at $2 45; 7,500 Western Red, on private terms; and a lot of 200 bushels new South Carolina Red, the first parcel sold here this season,—having been bought by HOGEN & BRO., proprietors of the Globe Mills, in this City, at $2 50. Rye is dull and nominal; a small sales of Jersey were effected at $1 70, ⅞ bushel. Corn is still less freely offered, and being in fair request, is a shade firmer in price. The sales since our last comprise 44,000 bushels, chiefly Western mixed, at $1 01@$1 05, ⅞ bushel.

HAY—There were 600 bales River sold at 95c.@$1 20, chiefly at $1, ⅞ 100 lbs.

HIDES—Despite the increased receipts, the supply pressing on the market and the existing demand are quite moderate, and on this account prices are unaltered. The total stock here to-day was a little more than 70,000, but of this amount a good portion was held in Boston, and for sale freely.

HOPS—Sales of 100 bales last year's crop transpired at 20c.@21c. ⅞ lb.

IRON—Scotch Pig is less active, but stiffly held at quotations, cash, and 3 mo. $21, 6 months, ⅞ ton. American Pig is also quiet yet steady at $25@$27 ⅞ ton. Other kinds are unchanged.

LATH—Eastern are in demand at $1 62½@$1 75, cash, ⅞ thousand. The supply is moderate.

LEAD—No important sales or changes have occurred since our last in Pig. Bar is worth 9c. @ 9½ ⅞ lb., but rules quiet. Pipe and Sheet Lead remains as last noticed.

LEATHER—Domestic Tanned Sole is in fair request, and is steady in price. Other descriptions have no material change.

LIME—Rockland is in demand at $1c. for common, and $1 10 for Lump ⅞ bbl.

MOLASSES—We have heard of sales of only 200 bbls. New-Orleans at 32c.@33c. ⅞ gallon.

NAILS—Appear moderately active at old quotations.

NAVAL STORES—Crude Turpentine sells slowly at $3@$3 25 ⅞ 280 lbs. Spirits do. is in a little more demand at from 46c.@41c. ⅞ gallon. Tar is sparingly dealt in; but is held at $2 37½@$2 25 ⅞ bbl. White Resin has not varied. About 1,000 bbls. common Rosin brought $1 85 ⅞ 310 lbs., delivered. Pitch is dull and nominal at $2 50 ⅞ bbl.

OIL CAKE—Clay Hill Oilseng is in some request at $40@$42 ⅞ ton, cash.

OILS—Castor is in demand and is stiffly held at 75c @ 78c. for Whale, and $1 20@$1 25 for Sperm, ⅞ gallon. Manufactured kinds are salable and steady at 50c.@60c. for refined Spring and Summer Whale, and $2@$2 05 for unbleached Sperm, ⅞ gallon. Red, Palm and Olive Oils are unaltered. Linseed is quiet and languid at 80c. for large, and 87c.@90c. for small lots, ⅞ gallon. Lard Oil is in stock request at 85c.@90c. ⅞ gallon.

PLASTER—Is selling in lots as wanted at $2@$2 50 for blue and white, ⅞ ton.

POTATOES—The market is quite amply supplied, but is not active. Prices favor buyers, being now down to $2@$2 25 ⅞ bbl. for Western Red and White and Carters, and $2 50 for Jersey; $1 75@$2 for good new South-ern, and $2@$2 50 for new Bermuda ⅞ bbl.

PROVISIONS—Pork is in still better demand, and very firm in price. The day's sales include 1,700 bbls. at $17 87½@$18 for Old Mess; [illegible] 25 for New Mess; and $18 12½@$18 25 for Prime Mess ⅞ bbl. Cut Meats are quietly pressed on old terms—250 pkgs. chiefly Shoulders at 8c.@10½c. for Hams and 7½c.@7½c. for Shoulders, ⅞ lb. Beef is steady, and in good request. Lard is firmer and steady, sales comprising about 250 pkgs. and tcs., fair to prime, at 8½c.@9c. ⅞ lb. Beef to Smoke, but [illegible] ⅞ lb. Tallow is steadier, but quiet. Stearine is firmer. Oils are steady and quiet. Rosin is steady, with sales of 500 bbls. Wilmington at $1 87½@$2 ⅞ 280 lbs. Freights are dull and nominal. Cotton to Liverpool is quoted at 5-32d. ⅞ lb. Beef to Havana, per bbl., $1 50@$1 75 for Country Mess; $18 50@$19 for repacked Mess, and $16 50@$17 for extra do. ⅞ bbl. Pork to Havana is dull and nominal. Flour to Havana is quiet at from $5@$5 50 ⅞ bbl. Rosin is dull and nominally unchanged at from $1@$1 50 ⅞ bbl. Cheese to Havana is quiet at 8c. ⅞ lb.

RICE—Carolina prime is quiet and inquired. The sales embrace 160 tcs., at 6½c.@6¾c. and 375 for Common to Fair. ⅞ lb.

SALT—Liverpool has been more sought after, but has not varied in price. Other kinds are unaltered.

SEEDS—Cloverseed is inclined to ease off. The general stock is limited.

SOAP—About 150 boxes Castile brought 10½c. ⅞ lb.

SPICES—The demand is moderate, at unchanged quotations.

SUGARS—Are pretty brisk and steady, the day's sales including 600 hhds. Cuba Muscovado at 6½c.@6¾c., with 300 hhds., 16 tcs., and 74 bbls. do. on terms not made public. Refined Sugars are unchanged.

TALLOW—Is less active, but steady, at 12c. ⅞ lb.

TEAS—Privately, there is not much being done, yet prices remain without variation. A public sale occurred to-day. The catalogue was not one of the best. It was chiefly composed of lines of common and medium qualities of Green and Black Teas. It sold freely and well, however. We append a full report:

TIN—Continues quiet at unaltered prices.

TOBACCO—We have nothing particularly new to notice in this line.

WHALEBONE—Is salable and firm, as previously reported. There is but a rather poor supply in market.

WHISKY—Sales were made of 250 bbls. Ohio and Prices at 26c.@26½c. ⅞ gallon.

WOOL—The stock of domestic is less extensive, and as there is not much coming forward from the interior, it is not easy to have orders filled. Few of these, however, are in market, and as the demand from dealers is limited, prices are without material change. Spanish is still reported as progressing in the country, checked by the rising claims of wool-growers. Foreign Wool rules quiet but steady. It is said to be less abundant. We append a revised list of our current prices: American, Saxony Fleece, ⅞ lb., 39c.@42c.; American, Full Blood Merino, 37c.@39c.; American, ¾ and ⅝ Merino, 31c.@34c.; American, Native and ½ Merino, 30c.@33c.; Extra, Pulled, 33c.@35c.; Superfine, Pulled, 32c.@31c.; No. 1, Pulled, 32c.@26c.; Peruvian, Washed, 36c.@36c.; Valparaiso, Unwashed, 13c.@14c.; South American, Common, Washed, 12c.@13c.; South American, Extra Ries, Washed, 14½c.@16½c.; South American, Unwashed, 8c.@9c.; South American, Cordova, Washed, 20c.@22c.; East India, Washed, 30c.@35c.; African, Unwashed, 9c.@18c.; African, Washed, 18c.@30c.; Smyrna, Unwashed, 12c.@14c.; Smyrna, Washed, 23c.@35c.; Mexican, Unwashed, 12c.@14c.

ZINC—Rules dull and heavy, chiefly at 7½c.@7¾c. for Sheet, ⅞ lb.

FREIGHTS—For Liverpool, the engagements included a quantity of Bacon at 15s. ⅞ ton; 30,000 bushels Corn at 5d.@5½d. in bulk and bags, ⅞ bushel, and 600 bales Cotton at 5-32d.@9-16d. ⅞ lb. For London, there were shipped 1,000 bags Oil Cake at 15s., and 17 tons do. at 17s. 6d. For other ports, we heard of no important engagements, and rates were unchanged. The latest charters have been: a ship from St. Stephen to Liverpool, Deals, at £3; one from St. John to Liverpool, £8, and Timber, £1 2s. 6d.; a bark from Escoumain, River St. Lawrence, to London, £3 15s.; one, of 220 tons, from a Southern Port, Lumber to Rio, and back to New-York, Coffee, $1 20 ⅞ bag; a brig, 167 tons, to Cadiz, Malaga and back, $2,000; a schooner, 296 tons, to Cadiz, $1,900, and from Lisbon to Rio, Salt, £1 8s. ⅞ ton; a bark, 375 tons, to Cadiz, $1,450; a brig to Aspinwall, Coal, $6, and Measurement, 15 cents; a schooner, from St. Marys, Ga., to Trinidad, Port Spain, Lumber, $11 ⅞ M, or if to Demerara, $12; a brig to Porto Rico and back, 36c. for Sugar and $3 for Molasses; a bark from Cienfuegos to New-York, Sugar, 38c.; a brig from Philadelphia to Havana, Coal, $1 37½ ⅞ ton; a bark to Cape Good Hope, a ship from City Point, Va., Tobacco, to Havre.

Retail Market Prices.

Fresh Beef has again been reduced in price from one to two cents ⅞ lb., in consequence of the cattle markets being well stocked the past week. It sells thus: hind-quarters 10c.@12c., fore-quarters 8c.@10c., porterhouse steaks 18c.@20c., sirloin steaks 14c.@16c., rump steaks 12c.@14c., ⅞ lb.; roasting pieces 15c.@18c. each; Mutton 12c.@14c. ⅞ lb.; Veal 8c.@14c. ⅞ lb.; Veal Cutlets 16c. ⅞ lb.; fresh Pork 12c. ⅞ lb.

In Salt Meats no material change has occurred. Corned Beef is sold at 10c.@14c., corned Pork 11c., smoked Beef 14c., Sausages 11c., Jowls 10c., Sides 11c. @12c., smoked Hams 14c., pickled Hams 12c., Bologna Sausages 8½c. ⅞ lb.

Butter and Cheese are in good supply and fair demand at about same rates as last week. Butter ranges from 21c. to 25c. ⅞ lb., new Orange County selling at the latter figure. Common brand Cheese 10c.@12c., English Cheese 21c., Sapsago Cheese 25c. ⅞ lb., Pineapple Cheese $1 12½ each.

There is a large supply of Poultry and Game, and a good demand therefor, at moderate rates. Fowls, 72c. @$1 25; Spring Chickens, 62½c.@$1 12; Tame Ducks, $1@$2, and Tame Pigeons, 50c.@62½c. ⅞ pair. Geese, 11c.@16c., and Turkeys, 15c.@17c. ⅞ lb. Wild Pigeons, $2 50@$3; Robins, 75c.@$1; Yellow Leg Snipe, $3@$3 50; Quail Snipe, $2 25@$2 50; Robin Snipe, $2 75, and Wild Squabs, $2, ⅞ dozen.

Vegetables were never so abundant as at the present time. They are piled up, mountains high, within and around the markets, on stands and wagons, during the early hours of the morning, but are soon disposed of at rates comparatively low, but not much lower than those of the last week. Potatoes 25c., Sweet Potatoes 37½c., Green Peas 16c., and Spinnage 6c. ⅞ half peck. Beets at 8c., Carrots 6c., Parsley 6c., and White Turnipsdo. ⅞ bunch, Water Cresses 3c., Red Onions 12c., Tomatoes 30c. ⅞ qt.

BEEVES.

Our Beef market has experienced a further decline. The abatement is not so much in the price ⅞ pound, but more in the estimation of weights, butchers having a decided advantage in this respect. The supply is about 900 head less than last week, and 100 less than the average number each market day last year; but the sales were very slow before we left, and a large number will have to be held over. The extreme price was 11 cents, and very few at this figure. The majority of the sales of good cattle were made at 10c.@10½c., with a strong disposition to press sales. Butchers did not take hold early in the day, anticipating a further abatement before night, and many will, no doubt, gain the advantage. The adverse tendency of the market the past month will, we hope, learn a number of "green hands," or even sharper ones, not to meddle with that they know nothing about, and not speculate so much at the expense of the consumers at large, and leave the trade to assume a more legitimate and natural course. Prices are as follows by the head, estimated at so much ⅞ pound for the meat in the quarter:

Best quality offered	—c. @11c.
Good salable quality	10c. @10½c.
Common quality	9c. @ 9½c.
Inferior quality	8½c.@—c.

The quality of the Cattle was of an even average, and very good. At the down town markets stock is plenty and sales slow.

The following is the number received at the different market places:

At Allerton's	2,184	At Browning's	271
O'Brien's	196	At Chamberlain's	201
Total			2,852
Received last week			2,919

The following are a few of the transactions:

MYERS & HOFFMAN were selling a lot of 54 Cattle, fed at Ontario Mill—average weight about 6½ cwt., steers, selling at 9c.@11c. Marked blue.

E. F. DUNNEY had 74 head from Indiana, a pretty fair drove, selling slowly at 10c. 10 sold to HAWS at 60½ a head, about 10½c.

OGDEN THOMPSON had 115 head from Illinois, owned by N. DUNNEY, weighing about 6½ cwt., selling at 6½ a head, or 10c. Fresh Fyatt County, by way of Lagonia, cost $13 50 a head transportation. Seven sold to CHRIS. GUYER at $63.

W. H. GUNNEY had 103 grassy this Beeves from Indiana, owned by CALDWELL & MCCLELLAND, average weight 6¼ cwt.—4 sold to GOCK at $77 50, and 5 to SAMUELS at $74. Market dull, about the same as last week.

MEAD & HOLCOMB were selling a drove of 110 head, same owners as last week, weighing 6½ cwt., selling at 10 cents. 12 of CONNCOCK's lot sold to GEO. HAWS at 6½c.—about 6½ cwt. and 10c. ⅞ lb.

W. H. BEDSON had a drove of 108 cattle from Kentucky, grade Durhams, owned by FORD, selling slowly at 10½c.@11c.

THOMAS WHITE & ULERY had 136 Illinois cattle from Bernard Gunney, selling slowly at 9c.@10c. These were pretty good quality.

BEACH & SMITH were trying to sell a drove of 76 head from Ohio, Fayette County, owned by SEYDINE. 30 sold to DAVENPORT to ship to Bermuda for Government use, at 8½, and 6 to TAYLOR at 9½, which is 10½c. ⅞ lb.

B. BERTRAM had a drove from Lake Shore, 90 in all—six uneven droves—fed by GALY & JACOBI, Illinois—some pretty fat, and heavy. JOHN HARRIS took 20 at $100 each, and 4 to JOHN KYNES at $111, and 10 to VALENTINE at $100, which is less than 11c.

JOS. WILLIAMS had 75 head from Ohio, Pickaway County, owned by H. WILLIAMS. Average weight 72 cwt., an even drove, selling from 9c. to 11c. Market slow.

New-York	61	Illinois	730
Ohio	512	Kentucky	264

VEAL CALVES.

There is a moderate supply in market, and prices well maintained. The quality is pretty good, and the sales are quick at 4½c.@6½c., and extra at 7c., live weight.

The receipts are thus:

At Allerton's	683	At Browning's	51
At O'Brien's	68	At Chamberlain's	34
Total			841

SHEEP AND LAMBS.

The arrivals have been larger than for some time past, and prices have given way about 50c.@75c. ⅞ head, with a quick demand. There were about 1,150 heads on hand at Browning's this noon. Mutton is more plenty and sells cheaper. The Sheep are pretty good, only a few common. Lambs are all from New-Jersey market. The annexed exhibit of Brokers' sales is corroborative of the above.

THE UNITED STATES MECHANICAL STREET CLEANING COMPANY.—Are now prepared to contract with corporations, contractors, turnpike or plank road companies, for cleaning streets and highways of every description by the year, month, or mile, in any part of the United States. The system of cleansing adopted by this Company, together with their sweeping and cleaning apparatus, has received the highest commendations from the press and authorities of every city where they have operated. The merits of the machines being not only valuable as efficient street cleaners but as preservatives of the health and cleanliness, particularly as on cobble-stone pavements and macadamized roads. In this respect they receive the testimony of every civil engineer, who witnesses their construction and mode of operation. In cider and lamp towns they simplify the whole system of cleansing, enabling the authorities to have any street or streets cleaned at a thorough manner at a few hours. For particulars address SMITH, BECKEL & CO., No. 215 Broadway, New-York, No. 410 South Front-st., Philadelphia.

MEDICAL.

THE MARRIED WOMAN'S PRIVATE MEDICAL COMPANION. By Dr. A. M. MAURICEAU, Physician of Diseases of Women. One Hundredth Edition, (200,000.) 12mo., pp. 250. On fine paper, extra binding, $1. Every complaint to which the married state is subject, from girlhood to womanhood, as also its wife and its mother, are fully described, with the causes, the symptoms, and also proper modes of treatment, in a plain, simple, but in the most chaste language, easily understood. And thus every woman can discover, by consulting herself, the nature of her complaint; and, if mature, character, and causes of her complaint; and be relieved much anxiety and suffering. The wife about to become a mother has often need of instruction and advice of the utmost importance to her future health, in respect to which her sensitiveness forbids consulting a medical gentleman, will find such instruction and advice, and also explains many symptoms which otherwise would occasion anxiety or alarm. How many are suffering from obstructions or irregularities peculiar to the female system, which undermine the health, the effects of which they are ignorant, and for which the delicacy forbids seeking medical advice! How many suffer from prolapsus uteri (falling of the womb,) or from fluor albus (weakness or debility), &c.! How many are in constant agony for many months preceding confinement! How many have difficult, if not dangerous deliveries, and slow and uncertain recoveries! Some, whose lives are measured during such time, will seek and find in its pages the means of prevention, amelioration and relief. How many bitter moments, how much anguish, might have been spared to the sufferer, to her husband, to her relatives, by a timely possession of this little volume! It is impracticable to convey fully the various subjects treated of, as they are of a nature strictly intended for the married, or those contemplating marriage.

For sale by STRINGER & TOWNSEND, No. 222 Broadway; ADRIANCE, SHERMAN & CO., Astor House, No. 1 Vesey-st.; DEWITT & DAVENPORT, (Tribune Buildings,) No. 3 Astor House, Broadway, and at the Publishing Office, No. 122 Liberty-st., New-York; JOSEPH TUCK, Bl. Mobile, also, T. P. PETERSON, No. 32 Chestnut-st., Philadelphia. On the receipt of $1, a copy will be transmitted, free of postage, to any part of the United States. All letters must be addressed, post-paid, to Dr. A. M. MAURICEAU, Office, No. 130 Liberty-st., New-York, or Box No. 1,236 No-x-York Post-Office.
